Ciceronis Amor.

TVLLIES

of CICEROES youth, Jetting out in lively Portraitures, how yong Gentlemen, that ayme at Honour, should level the end of their affections, holding the love of Countrey and friends in more exceeme, then those fading blossomes of beautie, that onely feede the curious survey of the eye.

A worke full of pleasure, as following Ciceros vaine, who was as conceited in his youth, as Grane in his Age, profitable, as containing precepts worthy so fa-

ROBERT GREENE. In artibus Magister.

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit vtile dulci.

LONDON

Printed for IOHN SMETHVVICKE, and are to be fold at his Shop in S. Dunstanes Church-yard, vader the Diall. 160 9, ped 2014

John H ( John A ho Tripos right Big AT honowest fic granon with Solur Sofatto allotto de The Griges right honou maraion soith dotus fagiontis ripas by the chololology 34

TO THE RIGHT

Honourable, FERDINANDO STANLEY, Lord Strange, ennobled with all Titles that Honour may affoord, or Vertue challenge, Robert

Greene wishesth increase of vertuous and Lordly resolutions.

HE Tripos (right Honourable) ingrauen with detur sapients, was by the Oracle allotted to Socrates, Achilles shield maintained with the sword, fel to Visses for his wisedome; Pallas had her Librarie, and her Launce:

and such as read Non where on Hercules Pillers, pointed our the Caracters with their Speares. Proportion the mother of Geometry, and Mistris of Arts, commaunds that Hestor have his honors, Alcides his glories, and that Olympus bee never without bright glittering armoul nor Greene wreathed Garlands, as well to grace the souldier, as to glory the Poet.

This confidered (right Honorable) having done my endeuour to penne downe the loues of Cicero, which Plutarch, and Cornelius Nepos forgot in their writings: I prelumed to prefent vnto your Honor, not high written Poems, as Mare did to Angulus.

but the trustes of well intended thoughts, as Callymachus schollerdid to Alexander, thinking nothing tere or veiwe worthy, sufficiently patronaged, va-lesse shrowded vnder the protection of so honourable a Mecenas. Whatfocuer was pleaded in Roffris, was not penned by Hortenfins, and yet the Senators heard and gaue plausible censures. Homer spent verfes, as well on Irus the begger, as Eurymachus the wooer. Euery lentence cannot Cleanthis lucernam olere, and yet men will read Poems, and praise them. Then (right Honorable) if my worke, treating of Cicero, feeme not fit for Cicero, as eclipfing the beauteous shew of his eloquence, with a barsh and vnpollished stile, yet I craue that your Honour will vouch of it, only for that it is written of Cicero. Ennius laboured as hard in his rough Poelies, as Virgil in his high Poems. Phidias penfil (in his owne conceit) was as therpe pointed, as Pigmaleons chafing tocles: meane wits, in their follies, have equall paines with learned Clarkes in their fancies. Apollo yeelded Oracles, aswell to poore men for their praiers, as to Princes for their presents. Starres have their lights, and haires their fliadowes. Meane Schollers hau e high thoughts, though lowe fortunes. Thus perswaded and emboldened (right Honourable) Iprefent this Pamphlet of Ciceroes loues to your Lordthip, resolued vpon your courteous acceptance, that weighing the mind, not the matter, your Honour will fay, if not Bucephalus, yet a horse. And in this hope resting, I wish to your Lordship, as much health and happinesse, as your Honour can desire, or Limagine.

Tour Lordships humble denoted
ROBERT GREENE,

To the gentle Readers health.

Eentlemen, I have written of Tullies Loue, a worke attempted to winne your fauours, but to descouer mine owne ignorance, in that, coueting to counterfeit I ullies phrase, I have lost my selfe in Inproper words: but hoping (as ener I have done) of your courtesses, I have, like bold Bayard, put my head out of the stable. If my method bee worse then it was wont to bee, thinke that skill in Musicke mard all: For the cleine was so dissonant from my note, that wee could not clap a concord together by fine markes. Chiron the Sagitarie was but a fained conceipt, and men that beare great shapes, and large shadowes, and have no good, nor honest mindes, are like the portraiture of Hercules, drawne upon the sands. If I speake mistically, thinke tis musically, and so desiring that you will take Tullies Love, as penned for your pleasure, I bid you fare well.

Robert Greene.

Ad Lectorem Hexasticon.

I N lucem prodit tenebris exuta malignis Romulei petulans, væsanag slammula Phæbi: Rorantem Authori (Lestores) spargite slorem, Intyba, Narcissos, Latacen, pistig roseti Dulces divitias: Illum concingite lauru: Emerito solers iudustria reddat honorem:

Tho. Watfon. Oxon.

Ad Lectorem de Ciceronis amore, Hexasticon.

M Iraris fortasse legens Ciceronis amorem?
Desine mirari, qui bene scribit, amat.
Crimen inesse putas? semel insaniuimus omnes,
Qua faciunt iuuenes, condoluere senes.
Linguam qui laudat Ciceronis, laudet amorem,
Greni solus honor, sit Ciceronis amor.

G. B. Cantabrigiensis.

Arro and Tucca wrote of Maroes verle,
And Dares darde to tell of Homers skill,
Of Ouids workes Latins have made rehearle,
And Poets have discourst of Pinders quill,
Many have writt Cosmographie of lands,
And told of Gihon and of Tagus sands:
Of Helens beautie, and of Ledaes hew,
The winged fancies of the lernd have told:
But of the proudest Poets old or new,
Who dard sweet Tullies fancies once vnfold:
As farre too high for all that yet have beene,
Then give the palme and glory vnto Greene.

hon hum

Thomas Burneby Efquire.

Now bloomes & bloffoms of faire Adons flower.

Cupid is stolne from Pathos secret shrine,

Diana lurkes, she and her Nymphs doe lower,

Bacchus that tempers sacred Loue with wine,

Ceres, and althe Gods haue made agree,

That Loue is God, and there is none but hee,

The Poems wanton Ouid set in verse,

His Art of Loue that banisht him from Rome,

Did neuer such quaint Amorets rehearse,

As are desciphered vnd er Tulliesdoome,

Whose Romane phrase setcht from Parnassus hill,

Saies, none but Tully in the depth of skill,

The World Soffe Caro. This

T VLLIES

Here divelled in the citie of Rome, being metropolitane of & world, famous aswell for martiall Champions, as delicate for beautifull Ladies, a Confulcalled Flaminius, made glorious by Fortune, as having twife rode in the triumphing charteot, and worne the Lawrell wreath, given as a Daline to luch as baue been happie for many great bics tories. This Conful famous in the common wealth for his martiall exploits, fortune tohofe concette rells in ertreames, either to probigail in her fauours, or presubiciall inher fromes, to make this man the miracle of her beitie. lent him one onelp Daughter, of fuch ercellent erquitte perfection, as Pature in her feemed to wonder at her owne worker. Her baire was like the thine of A pollo, when that king his glozious trelles hee makes the World beauteous with his brightnelle. The Juoz'e ofher face over ballet with a bermilion die feemed like the blufh that leapt from Endimions cheekes, then Cynthia courts him on the Will s of Latmos. So did the proportion of her body answere to the perfection of her minde, and the honour of her thoughts fo fitted to the glozie of her favours as it reffed doubtfull whe ther ber outward beautics, or inward vertues belt the fur premacie, Infomuch, that as men docke to Delphos, to beare the Dracks of Apollo, fo divers refort to Rome to take biew of the excellencie of Terentia: who once belighted with the light of her grace, fit dolone this as an ariome. that Pallas the Datroneffe of Troy for twifedome of Venus the wonder of beauen for beautie, might not disgrace the dignities of this gozgeous Damolell. Rome (welling with the write of this matchieffe Wirgine, whole thoughts twere more humble then her face beautifull : aud pet the Baintera of that time feared to attempt ber portraiture, as finding the perfection of nature to ercede the proportion of Art, make ber the Miffrelle of their beffals, as one that counted fancis as bufit for a maite, as Alexander comardise for a foulater. Cupid fitting on his Mothers knie by the fount of Alcydalion feinghow Terentia, enemy to his amozous philosophy. let lone at fo liabt effeme, and for a charme againft bis mas aicall inchauntments, carried the euer burning fire of Vella in her breatt, clasping his mother wantonly about the necke .. be began thus to vattle. Seina moiber, wee have left the places of our accustomed residence, to avoid the troupes of fuch lutors, as onely end their loues with their lives, and have foine to the fecret fount here a while, to be folitarie to me are away the time with fome conceited that. I pray por tell me whereof are womens hearts mabe : I alke the que Mion mother, forthat I finde the biffination of their fancies like the lifference of their faces, which as they bee diffings quisit in proportion so they be altogether bulke in propers ties. Venus bearing ber somme make such a waggish bes manno began thus to reply. Some lav. my boy, of the liner of a Camelion, whose nature is to bee changeable in bues. and women as bartable in their thoughts. Dthers of a prit fone, which handled foftly, is as cold as fie, but preffed betipene the fingers, burneth like fire : they which infer this compartion, fay that women broke not favourable perfua. fions, not map be monne by intreaties, but the ready way to timole them to Delire, is to croffe them with Difbaine. Some fay their hearts are of Marble, which being bard, vet brons teares against every frome: Some of ware that is foft, admitting enery impression, those women have their loues in their loks which taken in with a gaze, is thoust out with a winke : fome of Adamant, they be bard hearted, and pet menfap, the Lapidaries haue tols to pierce them: others of gold, and they brelike Danae, that will admit no louer but fuch as lupiter. To be briefe, my boy, fo many fancies. le many fictions, enery one centuring of women's bearts, as his ofone experience bath found her froward or fanourable Cupid hearing his Mother discourse thus cummingly . Des maunded amonal all thele, wherof was Terentias heart of Romeformed, At this Venus fetching a bepe ligh. profes cuted her former premiffes thus. Teleil magge, for all pour play the manton half thou infight fo far into thine enemies thoughts, that thou balk quoted in thy tables, the resolution of Terentia, whom men count moze beautiful then my felfe, and more chaft then Diana Der beart, my boy, is framed of the pureft Diam and which, as it is hard to entertaine loue, la it is cleane fit for the receit of Mertue: I tell thee Cupid, Terentia makes Defire ber dendge, and Difdaine ber champion: She bonours all the Bobs butthee, and atmits all recreations but Loue: that the may finish her age with cotent of patience. The prime of her peres are grave, that the fruits of her time may be gracious, and the trives to bee as full of hones in her I fe, as fuil of favours in her lokes. To conclute, my boy, thee is Terentia, who feekes with labours to anothe loues, and incenours to be called as pertuous, as other Labies amozous. Thus Venus ended with a fromne. and-Cupid began with a faile the feorning at her honours. be Audving on reusinge, after a little paufe the cholerick boy burft forth into thefe tearmes : And thall Terentia offer pers fumes to Velta, and hemiock to Venus? Chall thee (mother) fraw Dianaes lawnes with Roles, and your pallaces with nettles: fhall the let Defire in rags, and Diftaine in filkes: Do. Cupid bath his boults fethered with & wings of fwallowes that flie fwift, and his arrowes beaded with frong tempered frele, that pierce beepe, like to Achilles launce, that did wound, and heale : my fhafts (mother) are of funby metals, the firongeff of them will I aime at Terencia, and if mp fortune faile mee not, I will change ber fongs to fighes, and her chaft prapers to amorous paffions. And with that, leaping from his mothers lappe, be bent his boto. thot an arrow, and bit Terentia cu the heart, but it was of fuch profe, as the boult rebounced, and brake into a thous fand thiners. At this Cupid scorned, feeing his reitie countercheckt with such constant chattitie: and Venus smiled fees

Tullies Lone ..

2 19

ing her forme in fuch a rage : which fo increased his choller . that be discharged all bis arrowes at random ccareleffe of his aime, to be might any way rewinge. Amongst the rest pouna Lentulus a Komane Cauelier, paper tohofe conduct the Conful fent many Legions to make warre against the Parthians, was one of those bnfortunate men that Cupid had bruled with his arrowes. For haning fought a fet bate tel, and bought the bigozie with great loffe, freft supplies were fent him from Rome: Lentulus welcomming his new come fou'diers demanded what newes : after they had made report of the fate of the common wealth, they then, as a thing miraculous and supernaturall, discoursed to him the excellencie of Terentia, fetting out her glozies with fuch ems phaticall discriptions, that Lenculus leaning his head on his hand, became a willing andito; to fuch pleafant Whilofo php. Smiling thus in the ouer-fwete potions that Love had tempered like Circes to be witch the warp and warlike Vliffes, be caused his fouldiers with often repetitions of Terentias beautie, to graft it in the linews of his new entertained fancies. In the day his bead was troubled with thoughts of Terentia: in the night conceit presented the visions of-Terentia. Withere before he lato plots bow to circumue nt the Parthians, now be beuifed bow to compafe his paffions:lone witht bim to make lig it efteme of war but growing to bee careleffe, be gave his enemies occasion ofincouragement. Being thus perplered with bnactquainted fits, be beganne thus fonibier like to behate with bimfelfe. Daue not the ancient Romanes, whose flatues and trophes have filled the morlo with wander of their chinalry, aimbe the end of their honors to confift in armes have they not fetch fame from the heavens with their fwords, and bound her to their fortunes with circumferiptions of bloo? have not their launces pierft oblinion to the heart and their martial! Deeds registred their names in the chaonicles of memozy ; and pet Lentulus bolt thou make light effeme of war, whole very frownes are bos nour, and whole fauours immortall glories & Bluth at thy thoughts that are to bale and weepe with Cafar, that thou ball not done wonders with Alexander. Ebou art elected bp

by the Confuls, as a choice man'of Rome, as high prifed for the halour, as the parentage, and vet the mother was of the or at Emili, Thou art fent against the Parthians, a nati on marlike and resolute, either to challenge the grave with thu (mozd, oz carne out their tombs with the Courtelare. Darest thou then Lentulus, amiost those glozious thoughts of a fouloier, admit the least pattion of a Louer ? thall the pos licies to little for the Parthians, be imployed in purchaling Terentia? Do Lentulus, draw thy fawchon, brandift tranainst Rome, and if Loue loke but over the walles, menace her with the martiall weapons : and vet Lentulus, bee not fo Roicall, as to reied fuch a mighty Deitie. Haue not the Romans ereded a temple nære bnto Campus Martius? Are not Unights bubbed, to befend Labies ? Wake they not their Delmes proud with their Miltris fauours? Mars hath bis amours, as he bath his armours. Alexander glozied in his Lours, as he triumphed in his Micories. Great Pompey bath his Iulia, Cafar his paramour, Souldiers baue loued. and fo will 3. Haning thus dicourled with himfelfe, his hope of his love , Drave fuch an invincible conrage into his minde that he palled not many dayes without giving battell to the Parthians, in which aetting a glozious bidozy he fent great treasure, and many captives home to Rome, with great intercession to the Senate, that he might not winter from bis owne Country. The Cenfuls glad to favour bim with any reasonable grantaent Lepidus to take bis place, and recalled Lentulus home to the Citie. The fame of whose high intenbed thoughts, his conquell inlarged with infinite treasures, and rich captines, made k ome to King with Ecchoes of his matchleffe excellencie : infomuch, that paffing through the Aretes to the Capitoll, there to be invelled with the bonozs bue to his bidoxies, multitudes of Romanes were placed on fcaffolds, to take bein of fo brave and bardy a captaine, and the gozgeous windo wes of the citte were fruffed with trops of beautifuli Ladies, tickled with an earnest defire to fatilife their fights with his perfonage. Palling thus in pompe, lulius Calar then being Dictatoz, after the follemme rites and magnificent triumphs were ended, bade bim hometobin, ner.

15 3

ner. where bee feather him with fuch rovalite as might befreme the greatnesse of the bay, and the highnesse of his owne thoughts. Thus flew the fame of Lentulus through Rome. as & toonder of his time. but all those triumphant dignities conlo not ertireate the melancholy of this Romans thoughts inferted into his minde by the fond inchauntments of love. but as the wounded Dere wingeth forth teares, and the Mirtle pierced peelbeth gumme, fo Lentulus after bis beepe impression of love, could afford nought but fighes and forrowes. The Bemme of Terentias excellencie reflected in his minde like an object in a Crystall mirrour, that amobest his molt ferious affaires, bee found the paffions of Loue to bee intermedled. Fortune that had tred her fanours in the top of his Creft haife persuaded to become constant to this ware like Champion, feeing Cupid wrong him without cause. thought with a fourraigne antibote, to prevent the further enfuing pretudices of fancie. Forcing therefore Deportunitie to baunce attendance boon this her barling, it fell out, that Flaminius the father of Terentia, feing bow Lentulus was generally feafted of all the Senators in Rome, thought, as monall the reft, to wellcome home the warrioz with a banket : and therfore meeting him at one Titus Annius Milocs boule, bee folemnly muited him home to binner. Lentulus, as full of curtelie as courage, after great thankes, promiled to be his queft. Witherenpon Flaminius pasing bome, made provition : and Lentulus feating to his lodging, beeing folis tarie coceined fuch in ward for at this fivet oportunitie that leaning upon bis left hand, fmiling to himfelfe, bee breathed out thefe words : Such, I fe well as Mars honors with fanozs, Venus wil not croffe with frowns: thole that conquer in Warres, thall not periff in Loues, Capid fauos his fathers followers, and fuch as fortune finites on in battel. the laughs on in fancies : I coueted to beare charge against the Parthians, and the Senate elected me Lord of their Legions: Delire wilht me to hane a light of Terentia, and her father entertaines me for a queft. A made conquest of mine enes mics with the fword, and why may I not winne Love with my loyalty: feare not Lentulus, thefe concluded comparts fone fons are prodigious, be Augure then to thy felfe, and calcalate thy and fortunes by thy thoughts: Loues and Warres crave sourage. Feare not man, for the intreaties are as mighty, as ber benfals can be contrarie. As thus be mas bebating within himselfe, the clocke tolde him it was time to go to billte his Hoft fo that he made himfelfe as fumptions as might be, and at the parting from his chamber booze, bee fait thus; If Venus (quoth be) thou fauour me in my loues. I will become the bowed feruant in my life: I will frewthe Alters with Roles, and let thee by theines at Paphos, T will bind by my temples with Wittle bowes, and for the mare tiall garland weare a weath of flowers. I will have bones neftes in my pallaces, and what belongs to thee, that be fome of my teliant, onely grace me with the fauour of Terentia. Ending this his bow, hee paffed for ward with his traine towardes the house of Flaminius, where beeing arrived, the grave Senators entertained him with fuch magnificence. as Lentulus perceiued his welcom by his honozs. The bood courred, and the company ready to fit, Lentulus was placed chicfe at the Table, who all this while, having not fight of Terencia, fate as a man nypped on the head, although there were at the table, to grace the feaft, many braue and beantifuli damfels Sitting thus in a dumpe, he was cheered by by all the company:but at laft, to fet him in his follity. Terentia was commaunded by her father, to baing him in a cup of Brakill wine. She that little cared to be feene in open banquets, as holding it contrarte to the rites of Velta, burft not pet, but with all biligence, fignifie ber obedience. Therefore attired in a rich robe of white, spotted with farren of golde. tempering the posphory of her face with a bermilton blufb. loking like Diana when the batht at A &conspresence the came into the Hall, where humbly faluting al the company the belivered the wine to her father. Lentulus fixing fame had but blemithther fanus, in being to partial of her prailes, fat To amaled at the beautecus excellencte of Terentia as tib the Centaurenamozed of luno. Dis ete made furuer of her beau ties, who polling the ouer to p conteplation of his thoubts. lo let on fire bis beart with her perfections, as his formacke frut thut by her oufice, to give his eves leave to wonder at the curious conceit of natures cuming : his lokes began to fparkle lone, as ofo thefe of Adon, when hee paped boon the face of his paramet : the change of his colour be wayed his new entertained pa flions : which noted by Terentia, halfe anary at loues folly, thee disconered her colour with such a bluth, as Lentulus, letting fall bis knife bpon lis trencher, faib alene, Non fortuna, non Bellum, meaning that net ther the bigheff fate of fortune, nor the fatal cuent of warre, could conquer that heart that her beautie bath made lubied. Terentia at this bierpected exclamation abalbed, and the reft of the company maruatled : but Flaminius willing to move some table talke, bemanded of Lentulus what he meant by this lubaine embleme. Lentulus willing to make flight at the foule, and pet not to have a bell at his bele, answered thus. Williff 3 lap in legar, intrenching the Parchians, moze hardle with legions of men, then with bepe railed counters mures, my fouldiers discouered a Caftle, which once wonne, displacing the arength of the Country, feing the Romans had made me vicegerent of their forces, although the place lamed impregnable, teing as well befended by nature, litus ate bona mount, as by prowelle fored with men and mu. nition, pet prifing bonoz moze beere then bloud, and Couns tries profite beyond the content of life, 3 bent certaine legis ons against the Castle, and following the opinion of Quintus Fabius Maximus, fought by belay to brine them to compolition, for it was faid of bim.

> Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem, Non ponebat enim rumores ante salutem. Ergopostáz magisáz viri nunc gloria claret.

Seking so to get conquest by famine, which would have beine presudiciall with the sword, at last, seing their sorces greatly weakened, I gave assault, and entred, putting the souldiers to the sword, yet willing to save the Lord of the caste, for that his valour discovered his thoughts, searching in out, I sound him in his bed chamber, his wife slaine, and the blade pet varnifhed with bloud grafued in his fift. faring me in the face with a gaffly looke, that frod amaged at the fratageme, bee fpake thus. Romane, report in the Senate house that where you ercell be in policie, we erceed pou in resolution : this Lady which thou feelt fere weltring in her gooze, ismp wife, and for the brookes not condfancies. The craued to end her love with her life: a married her a birgine and honozable. The dies a wife and honeft, asfamous in Parthia foz her bertues, as pour Romane Dames for their braueries. Wee lined without farres, for that the defire of the one was the content of the other, confrancy banished felousie, and true love beld suspition at the launces point. Dur fortunes (Romane) thou hall pulbe boinne with the proweffe, warre bath made wracke of our fafeties, but for our loves, this (worde thall linke them together by beath, fo that Non fortuna non bellum, And with that the refelute Souldier fabbed bimfelfe. Affonied at this ve remptozy maffacre, although all fained with the bloud of the Parthians : pet I could not but grieue at the pattion of the man, and enter into confideration what that love foolb be that wanght in mens minds fuch resolute effects: so well tifting of his beterminate death, that I bowed in my thought. if ever I obtained the favour of fome gracious Pamofell to write bloud with the Parthian, Non fortuna non bellum. The remembrance (honozable Senators) of this tragedy made me to thew my felfe fo vallionate . Lentulus haning ended his discourse, the Senatours generally praised the resolution of the Parthian, and the Ladies the constancy of his wife, all concluding, that no impression could be so deepely inserted into the heart, as loue. Terentia, fuping the flame by the Imoke, finiled to fee bow couertly Lentulus bad cloaked his thoughts, and how, in bowing to bee confrant, bee bil coucred his conceit, fo that turning her backe the went into her Closet, and there blamed Venus, that had weapt fo banue a Champion in her lubtilities : not feeling, either the personage, or perfections of Lentulus, to firre the fraise continencie of her mind, Well, the Senatours not willing to let this fall to the ground, talking Will of the Parthian,

0

and

and amongst the rest of those honourable quests that were there featted. Archias the Boet, a man of a pleafant difpoffe tion twhe the tale by the end, and beganne to profecute it thus.

Grave Senators Tremember I hane heard Hortenfius the areat Datoz lav, that in times paft, the Confuls for res creation. would ble light and boneft pattimes, especially myzth at meate, as the fitteft minifter for digeffion, allead ging Scipio and Gracchus, who coueted to be as forund at their banquets, as they were ferious in matters of effate. Seeing then (Keuerent fathers) Lentulus bath entred into the discourse of Loue producing the Parthian, who amonast his other lingularities, boafted, that his fancie bad neuer beene Grained with fealouffe, a plaque that is greatly now a baves predominant in Rome might it please you to favour bs with your gracious confent, we would intreate i entulus to discourse to be bis opinion of realouse. The Benatours aranted, and Terentia beeing come to give attendance on her father smiled. Lentulus casting his eyes boon his loue. feeing a bimple in her cheeke which was to him Cos amoris. made Archias this prefent answere.

Hat the Thebans appointed Zetus to have discoursed on Buficke oz they of Theffaly Menalcas, to have deferibed the Court: The principles of the one had beene as voide of Art, as the precepts of the other farre from Bonour : The one being an enempto Busicke, the other, aswaine, and a thepheart. So Kenerend Senators, and honourable Ladics of Rome) Archias, bow fkilfull foeuer in Boetry, vet bath failed in his policie, to request him to discourse of realouse, that never as pet offered incense at the Altars of Loue. If it had been, to make discription of a battel to have discoursed the order of the phalang, or any point of Martiall dicipline, then could I, as a Souldier, have dilated fuch principles, as war: like Captaines, regifter in the field with their fuozd. But of Loue, whose amozous beitie agreeth net with brumme and trumpet: 01 of Jealoufie, as the Chadolve of francie, it fitteth meas little to bifcourle, as the fhomaker of Appelles postrature. But if ever Venus that bouch me that faucur.

to grace me with a special loke from my Histris excellencie, and that mine eye be allowed, as Paris was, to sudge of beauties. Archias shall commaund mee as a friend in the meane time; for Poets and Painters ought to have their conceits feathered with Mercuries plumes: I wil desire Archias to supply my ignorance, and to describe the effectes of Jealouse. The Senators, and therest of the company, hearing how cunningly Lenculus retorted the argument opon Archias, with a resolute consent, they insopned Archias to play the Drator, who being pleasantly disposed, began thus.

The wolves in Syria that barke against the Mone, suffer small rest, and great hunger. Arrowes shot against the stars, pierce downward: and the Syrens that sought to intrap V-ly sles, perish themselves: so Gentlemen, I sought to make experience of Lentulus eloquence, and Hortune bath alotted me to discover mine owne ignorance, but least I might bee counted, eyther to stoicall, or to to full of selfe conceit: so Zealouffe thus.

Archias discourse of Iealousie.

C Ach as have fearched into the deepest Aphorismes of A-Daacreon, or pried into the principles that Ourd fet dolon in his Molumes, finde Loue to bee fuch a pure vallian of the mind as like the Cryffall it admitteth no bruife, without a cracke: it groweth from the buton of two minds, conceived by the special liking of some excellent good, confifting in exteriour beautie. 02 interioz bertues. 02 the combining of them both in one foule, and fingular perfection. This choice of ercellencie confirmed by election once impainted in the heart is fo precious as the pearles of Cleopatra. The fleece of Colchos, the fands of Tagus are traff, if brought into compare lotth this divine and metaphticall pattion: man having fwilled in this nedar of Loue, is fo charie, that hee not onely brooketh no corrivall of his thoughts, but admitteth no partaker of his fauours, and from this feare proceedeth that fus rie which men callfealousie, being fecret suspition, that os there thould entop that excellencie, that he hath cholen fale and lingularto himfelfe. This (noble Homans) is that fiend that Pluto lent to checke Cupid in his bettie: this foringing from bel bringeth worfe torments to the mind then the frome of Syliphus, bulture of Titius, or whele of Ixion. This is the canker that fretteth the quiet of pthoughts, the moth that iccretly confumeth the life of man, and the poplon frecis ally opposed against the perfection of loue : after the heart he once infected with teloufie, the fleeps are broken: the dreams. disquiet Ambers : the thoughts, cares and for owes: the life. woe and milerie: that lining, he dies: and eving, prolongs out his life in passions worfe then beath. Aone tooketh on his love but suspition saves, this is he that covets to be cozrivall of mpfavours; Done knockes at his booze, but fart. ing by be thinks them mellengers of fancy, none talkes but they whilper of affection: it thee frowne, thee hates him and lours others, if the fmile, it is because the bath bad successe in ber loves looke the frowardly on any man, the diffembles, if the faugurs bim with a gracious eve, then as a man fraught. with frentie, be creeth out that neither firein the frain noz love in womens lokes can be concealed, thus both bee live reflies, and maketh love, that of it felfe is floet, to be in taffe as bitter as gall.

This discourre (reverent Senators) that love being of it felfe, a most excellent passion, is onely blemish by this foule and disgraced saine of islousie, as hatefull and hurtefuil to the mind, as a Cockatrice to the eye, or hemlock to the tasse. The purest chrisolite hath his strakes, the slowers in Sydon, as they are precious to the sight, so they are pession in savour: Love as it is divine with loyaltie, so it is belish but he felouse where so it is divine with sevent weet written.

thefe berfes.

When Gods hadfram'd the sweete of womens face, And lockt mens lookes within their golden haire: That Phabus blushtto see their matchles grace, And heavenly gods on earth did make repaire

To quippe faire Venus ouerweening pride, Loues happie thoughts to ielousie were tide,

Then grew a wrinkle on faire Venns browe,
The amber fweet of loue is turn'd to gall:
Gloomie was heauen: bright Phæbus did avowe
He could be coy and would not loue at all:
Swearing, no greater mischiefe could be wrought.
Then loue writed to a lealous thought.

Had not Iuno beniealous ouer Iupiter, lo had not bene furned into a Beifer : if suspition had not prickt Menelaus. Helena habnot Colneaway with Paris, Procris hab beens alfue, had the not suspected Cephalus : Then worthy Bomanes we fee what a prejudiciall monter groweth from the fearefull excelle of love, that not onely thortneth the life. Difquieteth the mind, but oft is the cause of most frange and bunaturali maffacres. If fortune frowne in love, we flie to patience: If there happen farres, who lovers brainles are introductions to belight. If powertie, why they hope boon time, thinking that there is Vicifitude omnium rerum, the lowelt ebbe may have his flow, and the deadelt neape his ful tide: if griefs, forowes, repulles, bukindnes, thefe bee but Amantium ira: And therefore Amoris redintegratio: but as the pumice from freth the paper from spots, and the fire confus meth flar : to this infernall plague of tealoufe roteth and raceth all true loue from the heart, that yelding my centure. I conclude with this Boeme.

Vita qua tandemmagis est iucunda, Vel viris dostis magis expetenda, Mente quam pura sociam iugalem Semper amare?

Vita qua tandem magisest dolenda, Vel magis cunctis fugienda quam qua, (Falso suspecta probuate amica) Tollit amorem?

Nulla eam tollu medicina pestem, Murmura emplastrum vel imago saga, Astra nec curant magica nec aries, « Zelotipiam.

Archias haning thus ended his discourse, the Senatours greatly praifed his discription of Jealousie, and from that fell to other pleasant talke as occasion offred. Will binner being done, they arole, fafter many thanks a curtifies, according to the cultom of the Romans, Flaminius to hono; Lentulus the more, taking him by the hand carried him into a garben. where Terentia fate accompanied with other Clirains of Rome: Damely, Flauia, Cornelia, & Iula, all of fuch erouf fite features, as they feemed to be the chouce Baragons of that time. Lentulus amazed at this gozgeous light, wonderd not onely at their beauties, but margelled why Flaminius brought him to friendly into their prefence. At laft, the old man burft forth into thele words : Lord Lentulus, I meas fure the thoughts of pong Bentlemen, by the prime of mp forepalled youth, not being fo cynicall as with Chremes in Terence, to proportion pong affections, by the cynders of old age, but to thinke with Menedemus, that the wing bath flowers and bloffomes, whereas Winter bath bried branches, and tawnie leaves, Thee old men, over whome Sacurnus is predominant having infuled Welancholic in our mindes couet, either to fit foldarie, or that our talke bee fe rious: pou that are pong, whose thoughts aime at delights, læke to paffe the time in pleafant discourses, Leaft therefore the time might bee tedious. I have brought vou amonalt thele faire Ladies, that you map make experience of loues, as you have done of warres: Mars no fooner puts of his hel met, but be falutes Venus : and pourcome from conquett of the Parthians; fee how you can enter combat with passions: and to Loze Lentulus 3 leave pou.

Lentulus feeing himfelfe thus invironed with thefe migratles of beautie, calling his eyes byon the goddeffe, whose favourable aspect might be the summe of his fortunes, ballie that the first, as Paris did in the bale of Ida, and stood as the foes of Perfeus when he breafed the head of Medufa, a turnd them to marble pictures, to amazed frod Lenculus at & fight of fuch divine excellencie, till the Ladies feeing this pource thus in a quandarie, began to finite, which reviving a kinde of amozous choller, in the Souldiers minde, hee began thus to play toe Champion.

Ladies, beleeue me, Loue is of more force then warres. and the lokes of women, pierce beeper then Aroke of launces, there is no Curtlear fo tiene, but armoz of high profe can withfand, but beauties arrowes are fo tharpe, and the parts that flie from womens eves, fo piercing, as the Corflet tempered by Vulcan, for Didoes paramour, boldes not out the piolence of their Groake. The gots tremble when Mars thaketh his Launce, but he feareth when Venus raffeth a fromme. Alexander neuer toke notice of the legions of bis enemies, but hee food frighted at the beauty of the Amazon. Thenfwet faints of Rome, maruell not if I were beinen into a maze at the fight of fuch beautious creatures, whose faces are Venus weapons, wher with the checketh the pribe of over-daring warriours: 3 cannot ( Ladies.) court it as pour Romane vonafters, that the their wits to their fanries:noz fill pour eares with amozoust ffcourfes, as Capids Apprentices, that frend their time in fuch louing philosophy: Poz can I faine conceited improfes of affection, to prome mpfeife loue ficke by Boetry. But as a blunt Souldfernem come from the warres, I offer mp felle a benout feruant to pour beauties, swearing to defend your honours against all men with the hazard of my bloud, and in patene thereof, aes nerally to you all, but frecially to one ( as love bath bis but tie) T befire to to be entertained as a butifull fernant to the Lady Terentia, Lentulus hauing thus boldly bozbed thefe louely Wirgins, the Laties feing with what affection hee offered his fervice to Terentia, began to bite the lip, & the to blush who seeing her selse toucht to the quicke, made bim this answere.

I know not (Lozd Lentulus) how to answere of lone, betaule as yet I never knew love: ignozant of his forces, because never acquaineed with his fortunes. Velta forbids bs

Thirgins,

Tingins to name Venus, as they of Ephelus hatefull Eroftratus. Diana deales not in Paphos, not suffers the any of her maidens to hunt on Erecynus, least meeting with Venus mecocks, they skip with Califto, and so seeke after losse. The lesse you are private to loves passions, the more welcome to our presence: so rather had wee fill our eares with warres softweeter are the teares that graive from a constant stratageme, then a smile from a comike tale of sancie. For your service (Lord Lentulus) sinding my selfe univorthy, I crave pardon: $202 can we by Vestaes charter admit such servants. But stir please youto bee accepted as a worthy Romane, and my fathers friend, loke so, such favour as mine honour and birginitie can asso.

Lentulus hearing the plausible answere of Terentia, although her first insimuation seemed to answere for his purpose, as preferring the lawes of Diana, a fires of Vesta, bestore loues holy temples, yet thee concluded so sweetly as might stand with the modesty of her honour: hee therefore made thus his reply.

In that Madame we are both nouices in love the fimpler are cur thoughts, and the neerer thould be the simpathy of our affections. Doues match when they are vona. Spens are grafted when they are forigs, the one part not but by teath noz are th'other fenered but they perith, Souldiers are like birgins, the one Arining to line bertuous, the other to die valiant : both enemies to love, while they waite on those which broke not love. I meane warre and Vesta: But both must love, as bauing bearts, and thoughts, eyes to fee beautie, and cares to indge of virtue, I Madame while I thought none greater then Mars, was bowed to Mars, but feeing Avomens wits are worfe then weapons, & that their lokes pierce deeper then lances, I have religned over my fortones at the fine of warre, meane to make proofe of the fweet. neffe of loue : Glad that in my firft entrance & baue the pas tronage of your gratious fauoz, armed with the which, Mars wel map frowne, but not conquer. But fir, quoth Terentia, I granted my faugur to Lentulus the Souldier, not to Lentulus

Lentulus the lover. And to Spadame quoth be, accept of it, for Ann a fouldier to doe you bonour, and a lover despight of myselfe. Flavia, hearing Lentulus, began to reason pretily to the purpose, being a Lady of palling merrie disposition, whose witte was as full of wiles, as her face of savour, second in the excellency of beauty to the Lady Terencia, thought to lift ber fouldier in this maner.

I fe well Lozd Lentulus, that as Women have their fa nours, fo men have their fayings : the one probigall in grares, the other politike in deceits, being as cumning to bil femble loue, as wee charte to bischarge lone. We Romane Ladies thought to have found you a flat louidier as forme rant in loues, as wee offancies : but how closely feener pon coner the flame, the fire will bee knowne by the Imoake: for pour talke lo lauours of Loues principles, as we indee pour are as cumningin fayning a pattion, as in figuring a battell and can as fone Deceine a woman with a pen, as flanghter an enemy with a launce. This will make be to take pour for a payfriend, and what wee like in you prefent, to difallow to merrow, fivearing if you bring amongs be Venus roles, wee will beate you with Vestas nettles: and therefore if you will be admitted as our fouldier, wee either forbid pon the name of love, or elfe you shall bee out of our fauours. Cornelia willing to break a feft with the Champion thinars ted Flauia thus. And what of that Madame, hath not marre taught him patience: be bath paft tharper brunts then momens frownes. But now your levell is without aime? 31 Madame Terentia Imile, bis penp is god filuer, tisber favour that is the loadffar of his fortunes, and how can wee enter into ber thoughts, but by confedures: thee full of beautie, and bee a proper vong gentleman. At this frumpe the Labies fmilet, & Terentia blutht for anger. But Lentulus fæing fuch a broad ieft pind on his Moulder, willing to make answere for his Wilfreste, although hee was fore put to his trumps, as halfe fet at a Non plus, pet hee followed his for tunes thus. 1

Indeede Ladies thinke I have patience to beare womens frumps, that hathencountred an enemies blow, but if 3

could as well answere the one as quit the other, you thould neither carried to hell, not to bequen. But to rengage my felle as well as I can thus. Firth Spadame, to cleare ing cuming in loue, I refer my felfe to the berott of your owne conficence : who, were you but as fausurable as you are frowith, would fone centure by my talke, how deepe I ain read in loues principles. But women freake by contraries. crying-like the Lap wing fartheft from their neafts, and fo take it beingebeckt for ouermuch loue, when you fee I am a nonice in loue. De perhaps Dadame Flauia, pou tooulo have mee love: if it beefo, 3 will become more fludious to fatilite your with: but you calling me a day friend, that peremptorie punithment were palling tharpe, for one fauit to thake mee out of feruice, toere it not that for fo bope a wound the Lady Cornelia bringeth in a lenitme plaifter, alleatging my fecuritie if 3 bee armed with Terentiasfa mour . Whame mee not fweete gotoelle, if I gime at the fairest, louibiers, baue epes that ran judge of beautic, though thep baue not weapons to winner beauties and eares to beine of perfections, though they want tongues to biscouer pallions. The harmonie of loue, I have heard them fay, confiftes in buities, and nothing more prejudiciali to fancy then pluralitie, either of thoughts or of perfens, Emong many thenam I charged butto like of one Willreffe : If I make choile of Tirentia, and thee bouch to grace mee with her fauour, Cornelia concludes truelp, that armed with the imagination of her beautie. I thinke my felfe able to broke your frumps, and to withfand the tardy resolution of Mars.

I maruaile then quoth Flauia, halfe in choller (if womens beautte he like Delphicus gladius, of high profeto tetend, and of tharpe edge to offend) why the Senators chole not out legions of Ladies, that with little coff and great allurance, they may make conquest of the world: but perhaps all fouldies be not of your temper, for they ble their weaponts, and you pour inkes.

Po Pacame quoth Lentulus, that is not the cause, for werest not that euery woman would be a Captaine, and Artice for lapremarie, they had refolved poor this tong agorbut fearing a mutinic among A themselves for impersorities lith energy one at home will be counted most wite, and most beautifull, though their wits bee meane, and favours leste, the Benate are glad to foreste such an inconvenience. The Laties hearing how countingly Lentulus had gald Dadam Flavia on her right size, began at to smile, a she after a blush for very anger, began to laugh. Lentulus glad that bee had given her a sop of the same saver, a paid her her debt in ber owner come: Calling to his boy to setch him a Lute, willing to their his Misselfe him as not ignorant in Posseke, saw her would prove the force of beaute by a Bonnet which he beard was made by Orpheus when her will first into love with Euridage; tuning therefore his Lute to his boice, beeling this ditties.

Marsin a furie gainst loves brightest Queenes

Put on his helme, and rooke him to his launce:
On Erecynus mount was Mauors seene,
And there his ensignes did the godaduzunce;
And by heavens greatest gates he stowely swore,
Venus should die, for strehad wrongd him fore,

Cupid heard this, and he began to crie,
And wisht his mothers absence for a while:
Peacefoole quoth Venus, is it I must die?
Must it be Mars? with that she coynd a smile:
She trimd her tresses, and did curle her haire,
And made her face with beautie passing faire.

A Fanne of filuer feathers in her hand,
And in a coach of Fbony the went:
She past the place where furious Mars did stand,
Andout her lookes a louely smile she fent.
Then from her browes lept out so sharpe a frowne,
That Mars for feare threw all his armour downe.

D 2

He

Blaming his choller that had caus'd his woe as Venus grew gracious, and with him agreed.

But charg'd him not to threaten beauty fo:

For womens lookes are such inchaunting charmes.

As can subdue the greatest god in armes.

Lentulus having fung this bittle, Terentia willing a litthe to the wher wit began thus I remember Lord Lentulus I have beard my father fap, that fouldiers were mont to tarrie fauours in their belmes, not fancies in their beart: emade choife of their miftreffe to incourage their thoughts. not to inchaunt their affections. But 3 fet the auncient bonour of the Romanesis flipt from promette, to pattions and the men couet to bee counted rather amozous movers, then hardy warriours: galing Mars in the face with bright Are mour, but offering Delfons to Venusin fecret concettes. This did not Quinous Lucius Cyncinnatus, who let it boton as Crimen capitale to fpeake of love in the Armie, 20; Sci-Pio Affricanus the great who made lawes that no women thould be brought prifoners within the Campe, leaft lone entring pell mell mith marre, might hazard the bantineffe of their honors. And pet Madame quoth Lentulus, Cyncinnatus haba wife, and Scipio was married. But quoth thee It was in their age rather cholen for fuccours, then amozous paffions: their youth was wholy frent in warres as ene mies to leves, counting fancy as a different to their marciall dignities : rightly indebe with a texpe indahtentring into the enormities that grew from following to precifely the court of Venus, for beleue me (gentlemen) Docts and Painters erre much that alcribe a beity to Cupid, and were worthy to beare some granous punishment for such a new innented berefte, which I thail approne with a Sonet, that one of Dianes numphes mate, when Iupiter had faul! ted with Calipso. Anolo Terentia taking the Lutem ber band began to warble this roundelay.

Fond

Fond faining Poetsmakes of love a god,
And leave the Lawrell for the mirtle boughs;
When Cupid is a Child not past the rod,
And faire Diana Daphnis most allowes.
Ile weare the baies and call the wag a boy,
And thinke of love but as a foolish toy.

Some give him bowe and quiver at his backe,
Some make him blind to aime without advice:
When naked wretch fuch feathred bolts he lackes,
And fight he hath, but cannot wrong the wife.
For viebut labours, weapons for defence,
And Cupid like a coward flyeth thence.

Heis God in Court, but cottage cals him childe,
And Vestage virgins with their holy fires
Doe clenfe the thoughts that fancie hath defilde,
And burnes the pallace of his fond desires.

With chaft difdaine they fcorne the foolish god; And proue him but a boy not past the rod, Terentia bauing ended her roundelay, as Lentulus was ready to reply, Flaminius came into the Barben with the reft of the Senators, whose grave presence brake off their amozous prattle fo that hee leaning the Laties taking his leave friendly of them all, but especially with a pittifull glancing loke of Terentia, as crauing fome fanour for his fare well, be went to the Senators, amongt whom be bifcour. ledlong of the manner and cuffome of the Parthians, of their resolution in warres, and of fach serious matters concerning martial discipline. Passing thus away part of the afternone, the company at last taking their leaves, pelling great thanks to Flaminius for their god chere, thep parted to their feverall mantions, Lentulus Cipping from the reft of the company, and with a gratious courage toke his abue of Terentia, and the other of the Ladies, bothing to be theirs eutr in any due honourable feruite, e fostrapning Terentia by the band he went bome with Titus Annius Milo: where he found Marcus Tullius Cicero, then a pout in Rome as bout the age of twentie peares, and very prinate and famile liar with Milo. The fame of this Tullies furpatting Clonuence was to bruted abroad in Rome as they counted him the mp2roz of that time, and as in Greece they wondzed at Demosthenes for his orations and the povular people fedde their cies with his light, fo as Tully past through the arets they cryed out Hic estille Cicero, faping, that as Orpheus with his Bulicke made the fromes and tres pipantto his melodie fo Tullie toed the people seares to his tonaue by his eloquence: And that Plato, who for his Philosophical! ferre tences was called tinine, in wholelips Bestelled, asprelaging his future excellencte, was inferiour to Tallie in his mulicall concord of his phrase. Lengulus noting his perfections, although his Parentage was bale, perthinkingtis eloquence might bee profitable to his loues, grew to be berp familiar with Tullie infomuch, that of bnacquainted Eith zens, they grew to be deare and valuate friendes, that their thoughts were bnited with a fure league efamity, and their hearts were receptacles for their mutuall pallions ; fo that their most fecret affaires were frankly participated without any boubting fulpition, But leaning their familiaritie, conuerling in Miloes house: Let be Bentlemen lie how Terentia bankt his beparture: Cornelius Neposforgets it in Tullies life, but if pen toflibeleue me it was thus.

DA

hée

Polimer were the Senatours and Lentulus departed from Flandinius house, but Flavia and the rest of the Ladies twke leave of Terentia, who being solitary by her selfe sitting alone in an arbour of roles, beganne to runinate on the Idaa of Lentulus perfection, and to call to minde his several and singular qualities, his Parentage, his person, honours, and his great possessions, but all in vaine. Loves posses were presented with an antibote, and her thoughts sealed up with an imminishe chassistic. For after the had long sate: At last with a finite the burtt forth into thefe tearmes.

If Venus could not infuse more dismall aspects in other Ladies thoughts, then into my minde, they should neither bold her as a Goddesse, nor honour her temples with pre-lents.

fents: Fonde are those women that are inquisitine after Afralogers, whether Venus be retrograde, og combuttin their nativities. Lan they but taffed the fivete faucies of Veltaes incense, they would abandon her as a planet care. leffe in their nativities, a not trouble the Augures of Arufpices, to centure of their fatail or fortunate fancies. For bad they but infight into the fwete life of Mirgins, bow fecure they live, if they live bertuous, they would never intangle themselves with the inconstant marcs of fancie. Vesta ale lowes befrie thoughts, Venus disquiet passions : at her alters we have frete flepes, in the other pallace broken flumbers. Diana countervailes our labours with mouth and quict:in Cypres we find toole tempered with care and for rowes. Weing birging we have libertie, married we tve our selnes to the variable disposition of a husband, who bee he neuer fo ercellent in perfection, or erquific in proportion, we Chall finde fufficient whereof to nather on ite . Then Terentia, let Lentulus palle with his honours bath fub-Dued. What though Alexander wome the whole world? his glories are but fortunes favours. Account him there orely as thou promifeoff, the fathers friend and thine as far as be treates not of loodding: and with this boon a foraine the fart by, and went to paffe away the time among companie, bolding Cupids beitvat dibaine, and accounting of love, as the Samnires bid of gold, which they fent as prefents to their enemies, but banisht from their oline common wealth. But Flavia poore Lady, was not vierced with foeaste a pattion for the having more develoimprinted in her thoughts, his hortours and vertues, and measuring the man by the height of his fortunes, fell into thefe bitter come plaints.

Mith what little proportion both interious lone bestow his faucurs? Mith how finall regard both blind froitune power onther treasures: Waking in all their actions, contracteties, that so they may triumph in inconstancie. Lone bath brought Lentulus from the warres to Rome, onely to to Terentia, fortune bath brought Flauia to the house of Flaminius only to lone Lentulus, Melittle regarding him, be liabilly abily respecting me. Thus bath the contrariety of Lone and Fortune made Lentulus bubappy, e me without bove. Ahi bat Terentia, though the ferme to cop, at the first will be more curteous at the laft. When the bath had but a mos nethe meditating on the excellency of Lentulus. "Then ob. then figh Flavia, and fap, ob then will Terentia not refect for honourable a perfonage, when thee confloers his pouth, his beautie, his parentage, his biamities. Lontulus no loner thal tome, but the will be wonne. This is the confedure of h.r. happe, and the dispaire of my hope. And vet it may bee that the Deffinies have appointed their difagre. For farres are Hicklers in loue, & fates are principall fauters of weblocke. If my praters may ferue to Venus: If my incense to Cupidif my bows to Lucina; if my fute to love, let their love periff in the bub, and wither in the bloffome. Had I Medeas mas aicke the Danges of Calipio, the inchauntments of Circes. the fail of Hecate, all thefe thould be imployed to breake the lone of Terentia and Lentulus. Fond Flavia, to be fo franticke in the pallions: Suppose Terentia bated Lentulus, can this conclude be will love thee? Ro, his thoughts are lettled. his reft of bolune, his bolues made, his fancy fired, and all spon that beautifull Terentia; 1, there Flavia, that is the more that galleth to the beautiful Terencia: For of fuch furpalling beauty is the Lady, that Cynthia bankes no compare with ber glestous brother? fo thou walk not enter compartion with the daughter of the Senator Flaminius. But, what is this to Lentulus? If the be fatre, yea as faire as ever ivas Sulpitia: If the be as cop, and offoatnefull as Calia, had he not better love homely Flauia, who wil counterwaile with lone what thee wants in beauty: & proportion out in buty, tohat the befeds in bignity. But what of this, lone admits mo erceptions, be cannot milithe ought in Terencia. Doth not prefent examples, vea instances executed in Rome auerre to much Is not Anthonio enamoured of the blacke Capp. tian Cleopatra: Doth not Cafar enuy bim in his lones, and couets to be corruall of his fancies: Affectish is oft blind and bemeth not rightly. The blackeft Cbon is bzighter then the inbitett Auozp : and Venus thought Vulcan at the firth a proper a propper fripling. Were Terentianever fo cop Lentulus will count ber difoaine but chastitte: pet Flavia may thei the may live in this milike, then half thou yet fome cause to hone other totle were the fill difpaire and then die for live ter is death, then to line and fee Lentulus enton the lone of Terentia. Hauing at this period breathed a while ready to que for ward in paffions, one of her waiting Loomen came in Who breaking offher complaints pall away therest of the davin mattle. Leauing ber therefore and her maide at chat. againe to Lentulus, who toke fucu inwards griefe at this new conceited love, that his colour began to ware pale, and to tilcouer pallions, bis fighes many and often to bewrap his forroises, his fuddaine farts in his flepes, and his mufings furcharged with melanchelie. Thefe noted by Tully. his private friend, made bim contedure that fomewhat was amiffe with Lentulus, Hauing therefore fit oportunitie, he began to lift bim in this maner.

The ancient Gretians (fwete Lentulus) that fet boinne vainciples of friend thippe, account the fecret connerling of friendes, and their mutuall participating, either of private forrolves, or concealed pleasures, the principalient of fuch professed amitie. Therefore dio Thefeus chofe Perithous Oreftes Pylades & to that end, oz elfe pon wong the, ferues Tully to his Lentulus. If thentt be requilite in friendli ppe to abandon fulpitious fecticie, I cannot but take ttonking. that Tully is not made partaker of Lentulus palifons. For as the Carbuncle is not bid in the barke, not the fire thut top in Arawe, fo forowes cannot fo conertly be concealed, but the countenance will pourtray out the cause by the effects. Thinke me not then fo blind but I can inoge of colours, not lo limple, but I can dame of affections: what meane thefe farre fetcht fiches, broken flumbers, this new belight, to bee folitarie, but that Lentulus feeling a paffon that pierceth to the quick, pet lekes to keepe it lecret from bis friend Tully? know this my goo Lentulus that Imoake Devrelled . Atileth more deadly: That the Quen, the closer it is pame by, the greater is the heate: and pallions, the moze primate, the moze preindiciall. Stop not then the ftreame, leaft it ouer

Solve. Conceale not forowes, least they overcharge, and provetike woundes, that kept long from the Chirurgian. growe to be incureable bleers: If it be a fathers frowne. an enemies wong, a friends mithap, reveale it, and fake remedy. If Lentulus eriefes have left bis honours in Parthis feare not. Rome will have more warrs, and Lentulus new dignities. If the Senatours have bealt ingratfully: Solamen mileris focios habuiffe doloris. The mott famous Romans have fore runne the in fuch beard fortunes. Scipio Subdued Affrica, what his reward was, let our annuals repost. If Lentulus milikes aught in Rome, let him abandon Rome, and Tully will baniff himfelfe from his countrep to go with his friend Lenculus, If fince thy comming into this Rozehouse of natures prodigalitie, thine epe hath made furuap of any gozgeous Damfell, and fo (my Lentulus) be in loue, although wifedome willes to bide amoss even from a mitie, and to tie fancie in the loweft Cell of the bart, vet reurale it to thy friend Tully, and if any way hee may ease his Lentulus passions, be bowes to falue thy fore, though with the basard of his owne fafetie. Lentulus hearing his friende levell fo neere the marke, gave a great grone at the name of lone: a fetching a beepe figh fait. Atna granius Amor. And with that farting from the place where be fat taking Tully by the band, began thus.

Where the Tully) that my pallions had any tope of remedie, or that my wound were fuch as might bee cured by countell, long crethis had Lentulus powerd his plaints into the bosome of his friend Cicero: but my forcowes, as they are piercing, so 3 have kept them private, as hoping so, no ease, and get delighting in my martyrdome. The bird sighth the snare of the fowler: Posmer doth the woodman bend his bow, but the Deere trips through the lawnes: energereature is taught by nature to seare his fall, eyet wretched Lentulus hunteth after his owne mishap. So have I described the sury of my passions, as I cannot but say, it is some that is thus simpatient. Love (my Tully) that is such a Lord, as infimiating his power with savor, be kepes possession by sorce. What s have their ends, either honors or death and in battaile, prowesse oft makes constraint of fortune: but in love, Delay is the onhappy deathsman, that holding the op, neither saves nor kils. Since my comming to Rome (my Tully) counting to 'converse with beatiful Ladies as before I had done with martial souldiers, amongst manie curious Pearles, I sound one orient Pargaret richer then those which Coesar brought from the westerne shoresoft properso long I gazed at the beautie of this precious. Iem, that I sound my selfe glad with such affection, as well repeate I might, but recall I could not and so, thou shalt say the islove worthy, heare how in discribing her excellence I have plate the Poet.

Lentulus discription of Terentia in Latin.

ualis in aurora splendescit lumine Tit an,
Talis in eximio corpore forma fuit:
Lumina seu spectes radiantia, si ne capillos,
Lux Ariadne tua co sux tua Pho be iacet.
Venustate suit verbis, spirabat edorem,
Musica vox, nardus spiritus almus erab:
Rubea labra, gena rubra, facie sque decora,
In qua concertant litius atque tosa,
Luxuriant gemina formoso in pectore mamma,
Circundant ninea candida colla coma:
Denique talis erat dinina Terentia, quales
Quendam certantes, suno, Minerua, venus.

Thus in English.

Rightsome Apollo in his richest pompe, was not like to the tramels of her haire: Her eyes like Ariadnes sparkling starres, Shone from the Ebon Arches of her browes. Her face was like the blushing of the East, when Titan charged the morning Sunne to rife: Her cheekes rich strewd with roses and with white, did staine the glory of Anchises love.

F 2

Her

Her filuer teates did ebbe and flow delight,
Her necke columnes of polisht Iuory.
Her breath was perfumes made of violets,
And all this heauen was but Terentia.

D fonce had Lentulus ended his well waitten Poem, and concluded his cunning with the name of his Mintelle, but Tully hearing Terentia was the Saint at whole their Lentulus effect by his denotion, entring his Exordi-

um with a smile, he began to be thus pleasant

And is there no fruit wil ferue your taft but fuch as grote in the gardens of Hefperides, nor no color content your ete, but fuch as is frained by the fifth Murex'. Buff pour fentes be fed with not hing but that is excellent, noz rour loue have no meane but to aime at the fayzeft? What Terentia? the beautie of Rome? the prive of nature the wealth of all the fauouring graces, whole excellencies are fpzed through the triple denifion of the woolde 3 fee (my Lentulus) foldiers have epes, as they have handes, and thoughts as they have weapons, and that how bluntly foener brought by in the wars, pet they are curious in the choiles of their loues. Will be it, Lentulus lones Terentia, an bonour to let his fan cie on her, but he kept his love fecret from Tully, a fault to be fulvictous of his friend. But who grieves Lentulus? Is not his parentage greater then the house of Flaminius 3s not his honours fufficient to counternatieber beauties ? Talby then is he foimpatient in fo agreeable a paffion : Lentulus bpon tels discourse buto Tully, from point to point, the successe of his loves, how he gave his charge over to Lepidus, onely that he might have a light of Terentia, and then recounting what prattle had paft betweene him and her after binner. her cop answeres, and firme resolution to remaine chaft. crawing counsell how bee might ease the disquiet of his thoughts. Tully pittying the extreame passion of his friend beuifed funday meanes how to make him Lord of his defires. But after the discourse of simby plots, it was becreed, that Lentulus Spould wateto Terentia. Lentulus dispairing of his owne aile and methode required Tully to write him a letter passionate, and full of familiar eloquence, which at his request, Cicero contrined after this manner: where by the way (gentlemen) I am to crave you to thinke, that Terentia kept the copie secret, so that neither it can be found as mongst Lenculus lose papers, not the familiar Epistles of Cicero. If the phiase differ from his other excellent forme of writing, imagine he sought to court his stile, and in his pen rather to play the blunt souldier, then the curious Drator, neither wing those Verbornen Fulmina, that Papirius obtects not that sweet and musicall cadence of words, which he beleth to Acticus, but howsower, or whatsower, thus it was #### Lentulus Terentia falutem.

Vod natura in venustatis & formatua Idea formanit (suanisma Terentia) nullo modo silentio praterire possum. Ne cuminis cautus amoris ignem celare conarer, incautus tanquam Etna meipsum consumens, in cineres redigar. Cum inter Parthos ver farer mbil mfi bellum & arma cogitans, a Roma vfque forma tua puchritudo, morumque in tegritas à multis sape nunciataest. Cuius rei fama ea incunditate aures permulsit, vt ( )renum quasi cantu delectatus,) arma abucere & amorem cogit .re cœperim, meque totum in Terentia potestatem tradere non erubescerem. Dinina autem excellentia tua cogitatio, eos mibi pro tempore in bellicis negotiis addidit ammos, ut breus denictis & profligatis Parthis, totam hanc prouinciam Lepido commifersm, quem unum tum konoris, tum fortuna mea participem feci, Parthifg, relictis Romam me cotuli, ve incundissimo fructu. tum aspectus, tum cosuetudinis tua frui liceat. Forma vero & pul chrituainis tua dignitas, tata tamque excellens fuit, ut non modo famam, sed expectationem meam longe superarit. Unde exquisitam tuam perfectionem oculis contemplans, & singulares animi dotes auribus accipiens, excellentia tua lacaminimo pectore collocaui, meg, totum amori, quasi construngendu tradidi. Cum sgitur tua unius causa (suauisima Terentsa) famam for tunasque & arma proiecerim, verum amantis officium fac prastes, & menon meritis, sed amore fac metiaris, ut iam ore tu mihi re-Spondens, ego in omni officio tibi fatis faciam. Taceo genus & pa.

rentes, ques tande bones cines & Senatores fuisse constat, taceo tri umphos, qui quales suerint Capitolium populusque Romanus locupletissimifunt testes, de dinitys nen glorior, quas tamen mediocres effe confeat, fet virtutis vim & amoris confeantiam tibi pro-Dono, que nes parui facienda, nec ingratitudine compensanda fant. Mesgiturfac redames (me aTerentia) & pulchritudini comitatem consungens parentibus gaudio, amicis vitilitati, & Lentulo voluptatie [epofis. Non diferte, vt Orator, fed, peramanter, vt superator tibi scribo quodsi amicis sidem, Lentulo amorem tribuas, ut parentibus gaudio amori nostro consentire dieneris, de patris voluntate nihil est quod dubites: sed si alseno amore, non nostro delecteris, dolores meos & augebo, & celato, & quamcung, in parte te flexeris tibitum vitam tranquilla, tum mortem glorsofam, vt fidels [ amator exoptabo. Vale, plus oculis mihi dilecta Teretia, & me tui desiderio iam pene languentem, aut ames eito, aut oderis femper vale, & referibe.

Lentulus to Terentia, health.

Cannot ( livet foueraign of my thoughts, and cheefemire roz of our Romane excellencie) (mother that with filence which nature bath floured in the postraiture of my lokes, buleffe heeping the flame to fecret, I fould, like Etna confume to cinders. Withen feated amongst the Parthians, has uing nothing in my thoughts, but warres and firatagems. thy beautie was repeated as special newes from Kome. as mongst the Legions, the melopie læmed to pleating to my eares, as if the mulicke of the Syzeus had inchaumed my fences. I cealed from warres, to thinke of lone, and from lone to boate on the coceit of Terentia. The thoughts of the ercellency boubled fuch courage in my attempts, that I conquered the Parthians, peloting oppemy charge to Lepidus, made him partaker of mp bonozs, and fortunes, e came to Rome, onelpto fee Terentia, whose sight was so beauteous. and lo facre beyond the report of fame, that mine eves furneying erquifitely thy perfections, and mine eares centuring of the wit a bertues, both in league confpired to prefent the Ibea of the felfe to the contemplation of my bart, inbich gredily entertaining fuch rare beauties, bath euer fince res mained a poze diffreffed captine. Sith then Terentia, thp Lentulus hath left bis fortunes to follow fancie. e bath forfa ken the warres to winne thy loues, holding the moze dere than country honour: thew thy felfe a Romane Lady, that Artuing in mind to bee matchleffe, thou mailt bee mozepzo. digall in fauours, then I worthy in beferts, and pelbe mee fuch mede for my loue, as Lentulus for his lopalty both merite. I boaff not of my parents, they are cittizens, and of the Senate with thy father. I fpeake not of mine honors, the Capitol can witnes what thowts palled from the Romans as pictors: what teares from the Parthians as banquifbed: both thefe paffions growing from the fortunes of Lentulus. Sop revene wes are fuch as fatiffe mp belires. But all thefe are erternallfauours, which though I rehearle, pet I brag not of. But the conftancie of my love, and the lovalite of my thoughts: thefe (Ferentia) are gifts of the minde, deferning no light effieme, much leffe to be requited with ingratitude. Confider then (fweet goddeffe) the finceritie of mine affectie ons, weigh both Lentulus lones, and to ble him in love, meas fure his fortunes by his fancyes. As thou art beautifull, fo ble inflice, give cuerie on his due : Honors to the gods, reuevence to the father faith to the friend, and love to Lentulus, and if it weafe the to grace me with the title of the bulband Lentulus: for I couet to like honefily not to love wan tonly, I write (Terentia) as a fouloter without eloquence. and as a louer, without dattery, if thou latiffic my love with thy fauours, 3 doubt not to leale by thy content with thy fathers and friends agree. If either thou art tred to former lones of millike of mine, 3 will close by my forralves with filence. Howfoeuer it thall pleafe the to returne answere: line with content, and die with honour.

> Terentias new entertained fouldier Publius Cornelius Lentulus,

If (gentlemen) I have not translated Lentulus letter verba reasons, that neither the samiliar physic of the Romans. Can broke our harth cadence of fentences, not durft 3 attempt to well Tullies eloquence to my rude and barbarous Englith, fearing, either to woong fo worthy an Datoz, in bifplacing. 02 rather difgracing his phale: 02 into farre prefaming, purchase pour frome, which I have ever in all duty lought to anothe. But howfocuer my translation fæmes wielled, I have kept bis. And foto Lentulus, who hearing Tully read the epiffle, both conceited the methode, and allowed of the manner : Dnely carefull where to get a fit and convenient meffenger. Tully at last called to remembrance one Eutrapelus, an especialifriend of his, who frequented the boule of Flaminius; by him ato Lentulus fend the Letter, and fo liuing in hope of a happy answere, he left Fully in his frudie, and went to the Capitoll. Cicero no foner was by himselfe, but calling to minde the discription of Ferentia, let out with fuch ercellency by Lentulus in his new learned poetry, and weighing how al Rome wondzedat her beauties, began to fele certaine fparkes of love kindled inhis young belires, which mate him bloth at his owne thoughts, and fmile that farcy fhonld lielurking amongst his librarie, to take him at discover But assone as he remembred, that Lentulus was in love with her, the faith to his friend, was acoling card to his affections, and he quens theo those sparkes at the first, least suffered, they may grow to a great flame: pet was bee mauger his headforced to fap thus much.

Hatt thoulined fortunate, and fauoured in Rome? half honour raised the strom a meane cottage, to be a companion to the sonnes of Denators? Doe the Consuls make the for thy learning one of the Pretextat? e wilt thou so, the hope of solid beautie, staine all thy sauours and sortunes with disgrace? Pay rather Tully, it will be honour to wore the baughter of so samous a Romane; but shame to the, to take the repulse and be denied. Thinkest thou Terentia will lake so love? will Cagles catch at flies? Will the wonder of our time, the paragon of our age, allied to the noblest houses in Rome, make choice of so base and meane a person?

Buha

Wahat half thou to beferue her loue, any moze then a little babling eloquence. Womens eares are not their touch fromes, but their eves, they fee and make choice, not heare and fancie. A dram of honour weighes bowne a prund of init and better it is to court with weithy revenewes, then with wet lines, or fine coucht poems. Thou half nothing left but a pozefarme called Cumanum, whose rents quites not y charges of thy ftudies. But suppose thou con'best win Terentia, fuffice the is toued by Lentulus: and therfore from this day name her not in thy mouth, not weare her in thy thoughts leaft thou violate friendlip, which thou aughteft to prife bearer then life. Thus Tully appealing his passions went out of his fludie, and willed Eutrapelus to beliver the letter with fecreep: who being one of Tullies cheffe familie ars, went with all specto the house of Flaminius, where finding the Lady Terentia fitting with Flavia & Cornelia at worke, hee being homo faceius, began merily to commend their bulwifern, and after some icffs broken betwirt the gentle women and him, bee craueth to speake with Terentia about certaine ferious affaires that greatly imported her fas ther: Wherepon the riling and going with Furrapelus into per closet, he there oclinered onto her Lentulus letter. Terentia abashed at the sight, blushed as balle angry with Eutrapelus, that he made himfelfe meffenger of lo baine a mate ter: pet confidering it came from fo honourable a perfonage as Lentulus, the bouchfafed it, and witht Eutrapelus in the evening to come for an answere. Dee was no somer bepara ted but Terentia buripped the feales, and then red the contents, which beeing contrary to her resolution, the Determined to returne with a deniall. But for that the would make her friends privile to her new loues paffions, thee went fmiling in and the wed them the letter. Thon pore Lentulus plainfong they all began to deskant. Cornelia papling Terentias fortnnes that was fo entirely beloued of fo hono. rable and braue a Gentleman, but Flauia bung the lip, and faying little, onely afkt, what a louing answere thee would write. Iknownot bow to reply quoth Terentia, be hath witten fo eloquently and fo cunningly . But quoth Flavia.

Nourt palone my credicit was waitten by young Tully, that braue Drator . for I haue read forme of his Epiftles, and tis both bis Dethobe, and his perp phase. That lully, quoch Terentia whom & hane heard my father e the Senators to highly commend to his witte, thinking him to recede etther Craffus, oz Hortenfius and with that fitting bowne, they began to enter into discourse of Tullies ercels tencies, concluding all, that he was as fingular amongs the Romanes, as curr Demotthenes was amongst the Grecians, It laft Terentia remembang ber felfe, to ke leaue foz a while of her two friends, and fealing into her closet, feps vina to the francis, thee was about to write, but calling to mind policourse of Tullies perfections letting fall her pen, the fell into a passion. Cupid waiting to spy this Welfall at aduantage, feing ber halfe at discouert, bniefee a bolt, headed with Defire, & feathered with Conceit, which piers ting the tender breatt of this roung Damofell, be made ber thainke at the blow, and fo breath out this complaint.

Haft thou (Terentia)ben wondzed at in Rome, for difpifing leve, and wilt thou now (boting girle) flumble on befire, Mall fancie Celips all thy former glories, that! Veftalefe a birgin, and Venus win a wanton ? Willt thou refemble the buds of an elder tree, which young are fiwert and sholefome, but blombe forth, are bitter and prefudiciall, thinke with thy feife that Dianaes fhaibs are moze pleasant the Cupids bowers, the one harbours chaft thoughts, the other amos rous fancies. Arnth but Lucina is a goddeffe, loue is bts ime, and marriage honourable. Cobars are faire, but in perloing no fruit they parchafe the leffe elleme. Da be a birgin, is a glozious title, but to line euer fo, is to wong nature in her fanours. Mell, haft thou not then (Terentia) a noble Bentlemen of Rome, Loza Lentulus to bee the bulband, a man whole pouth is filled with honours, and whole foring time floritheth with bignities? hath be not triumpht over the Parthians in conquett, and bound fortune to his temples with weeths of victorie? Is not his parentage one of the greateft families in Rome? Is bee not foz beautie like the faire Greksparamour: For wifebom like wife Vlilles.

that Cyrces could not inchant? For courage Hector, and of fuch revenewes as may maintain the with the most goz geous dames of Italy ABut the chiefe of his graces, is be not enamozed of Terentia, and fues for her fauout? This I confelle Seddeteriora fequor Loue, Ah that folith paffion which we tearme love, allowes nothing ercellent, but what it likes. At the bowed beggarp in Crates, for Hypfycratea thought him rich, in that hee was hertuous : deformitie in Vulcan, for Venus would not belieue he had a poult fote. Loue hath no lacke, and leffe reason : pet mult I lone, and whom, Ab Tully finet Tully from whose mouth flowes melody moze inchanting then the Syrens, one whole lips the Pules make a new Parnaflus, in whole thoughts reft Platoes Divine lute rites and in whole head is contained the lubtill wit of Ari-Stotle Is not bee as glorious in Rome for his eloquence as thou for the beauties : Doth not the Senatours wonter at his learning, as at thy perfection? With thould not then both our fingularities be lincked in the binon of Loue: Wilhy thould not l'erentia line to Tully, and Tully to Terentia? Abbut be is bale, the first of his kinne that talked of honour . Tbut be is bertucus, and famous for his eloquence, graces that counternaile the mean enelle of his parents. Ile lone hath reasons, being out of reason fell to arove against reas fon, therfore without further pro & contra in mine owne pale fions, I will love Tully, and therfore thus to Lentulus: with that taking by her pen, the wrote him this answere.

Terentia to Lentulus, health.

Then I read Lord Lentulus) thy letters, and fried thy loves, I bluth at mine owne thoughts thore rowed at the fortunes. I learth not the cause of the love, for it sufficeth to me thou bost love, if it lay in magnifier to grant the besire, or satisfic the passions. The reasons are sufficient to move, were it not, my volve and my bestines direct my minde to contrarie the affections. The honours (Lentulus) knockes at the close of my heart, the victories sue for their

¥ 2

1 02DB

Lords libertie, the logaltic enters pell meil with my thoughts, and giveth a fore affault to my fetied refolution all thefe put in their pleas to purthafe fatiour for young Lentulus. But Vefta, hard hearted Vefta, that makes ber bir. ains pliant to her owne properties, commaunes that I thut mine cares against such alluring Syrens. I count my felfe great'y honoured with the lone of fo worthy a Komane, and cuer will Terentia couet to proue as thankfull as hee affe dionate, enely in love pardon me, for that either Incuer meane to loue, or if I toe loue, my thoughts were fired before Lentulus came from Parthia. Walade not there, where the ford bath no foting, barke not with the Wolues of Syria against the Mone loke not to climbe to Olimpus, war not at impossibilities, but pacifie that with patience, which thou canft not obtaine, with being passionate. It thou fuelt to my father, and he graunt to conclude a mariage, per thalt thou want a bride : for 3 will fir fi die before I btolate my refolution. Sehe not then by my prefudice to aime at thy owne content, which be it every war, pet it thall never be in my love: not that I hate Lentulus, but that my fortunes forhibs me to love Lentulus. Afthou thinkeft thefe penials bee but words of course, and perswadest thy selfe that won en full be first cov, and then curteous as the marble, that drove of raine doe pierce. Thou thalt deepely deccine the felfe, and bigbly wrong me, but 3 challenge the promife, that howfor cuer I fruffrate the expedition thou wilt bury the conceite in filence. In which hope grieuing that the foowers came in Autumne, I with quiet to thy thoughts, and an end to thy loues.

Thine ever but in love,

Erentia baning thus ended her letter and new begunne her loues, the one directed to Lentulus, of other benoted to Tull the went traight to her two friends, Cornelia and Flania, the wing them the contents of the tetter, Cornelia lato the was to fewere and to icall, in lending such a peremptonic torie answere to so brane a gentleman. Flavia overcharaco with iop , praising the resolution of Terentia, withing that all maides were of her minde, miliking that which the moftloued thinking by retreating Terentia from the chace, to be militelle of the game ber felle. Well, this letter at laft inas fealed and beligered to Eutrapilus, who bring bim fall to Tullies lodging, found Lentulus and him in fecret, and fes rious discourse, and all god wote was about Terentia. Lentulus haufing received the letter, entring with Tully into bis fludp, read the contents. Do foner had bee bie wed, and res pielued ouer her cruell determination, but in areat ertaffe of minde, he croed out (Dulcsor est mors quam Amor.) And with that flinging out of his fluby, bee fell into bitter and ertream forrowes. Tully greening at his friends bard fortune. lought with plaulible per fivations to appeale his furious melancholly, withing him what foener Terentia worte, fill to thinke her a woman that would one while thoust out fancie with a finger, and ftraight entertaine love as a friend: that either time or his constancie would wake ber fope to the lare of his defires. Thus lought Tully to weft him fro his pallions, but in vaine, for herrefolution confirme with fuch effectuall and perswalive beterminations, so quatted the conceit of his former bope, that going passing melanchelly to his bed, he fell into an extreame feuer, which aggrauated with the inward anguish of his minde, grew to bee so dange rous, that Afclape the Phifitton, excellent at that time for his facultie, judged the difeafe to be moztall. The Serrators hearing of Lentulus ficknesse, forroised, as fearing Rome by seath thould bee deprined of fuch high enfuing hope : his friends flocked to his lodging to bilit him, who noting the heate of the ague, and the pallions of his minde, his fodnine Marts, his gall lokes, and his abjust answeres, inducathe extremitie of his lickneffe had halfe brought him to a lunas cie, ali feking by counfell to core that which neither counfell noz medicine could mitigate. Fruffrate of their extectation, they withed his weale, and returned with griefe. Duely Tally, whole letted friendlhip no milioztune could remoue, Itill day and night, as a fecond Esculapius, waited byen this perplexed perolered patient. But as the beauth of his pallion pierces into the center of his heart, fo the feuer increaled, that genes rally Rome bean to forow fo brane a warriour fhould be cut off in the berypaime of als fortunes : infomuch that the report of his ficknelle came to the eares of the three Lagies. Terentia mabe light account, as bauting ber beart baroneb with the lone of Cicero but Flavia are w palling palling talling as being toucht at the quicke, with the weake disposition of Lentulus, withing he might have cure for his maladie, fo it mere not by the meanes of Terentia: the frequented the temples offred oxifons, made bowes, and burnt incense to the Bobs. that they would be fauourable to ber louer Lentulus. coueting (if pollible it might be) with the prejudice of her felfe to baue profited bim : but in baine. Terentia was refor lute and he was refolued as the was bainty, fo to die in difvaire. Flauia, if ber moteffie might baue permitted, would have accompanied with other Ladies, gone to bis lodging, but therights of Velta forbibbing fuch familiar connerting, the rather in as reftrained by force, then withheld by reason. But feing the could by no meanes come to his fight, vet to manifest the sinceritie of her love, the lent him a letter to this sffcd.

Flauia to Lentulus, health.

If I could Lord Lentulus) pourtray with outward actions, the lectrecie of mypallions, or force as many teares from mine eyes, as there file fighes from my heart: The Anotomy of mythoughts would disouer a disquiet mind, and the source of mine eyes a sountaine of bitter laments. But seing that barrels, the fuller they bee, the less sound they pells: and where the current is deepell, there the water is most still; the mind surcharged with extreames, bath least bitterance of griefe, I leave you to suppose of mysorrowes which I cannot manifest. But know (Lord Lentulus,) that when the report of your scienes came to the eares of your new enterteined friends, Terencia sighed, as pitying with a common passion the sill of her countryman, but as one that might not relecue, being intercepted with other loves. Cornelia chid, as holding your lelfe in highest esteme, alleaging reasons to her that admitted no reasons, but her ownelone which is without reason. Dy selfesorowed, as wishing resert should have his due, where the honour of the man merits no lesse: we persuaded in value, a in seeking to bring Terentia to the bay, we entended to quench fire with swoods. Swing then your thoughts level at a wrong marke, a that no sutes can divert her fird her froward concespt: in carelesse extreames, pse patiece, wrestle with love, being wronged by love: peclo not to the arrest of Cupids mace, but as hee is young, so hold him a voy. Costoer, as serencia is saire, so the is cruell, and as specis full of savour, so the is two winkind.

flie not with Apollo after Daphnis: Diana bath moze Dombhs as Chaff, and vet not fo cov: ble love (mp Lentulus) as children do puppies, which while they are pliant and gentle, they cherrify by with crummes, but when they ware churlish they beat away with a roakes. Thinks nome is the Wiffride of the world, and hath many faire dames, if not of fuch excellencte as Terentia pet arethey more courteous. and no leffe vertuous, The curious Herbalits meafure not the plants by their colours, but by their properties : the Lapidaries make effecine of their fromes, not by their outward bue, but by their fecret vertues. Ale then the ancient cuffon of Elculapius, let lillies wither on the Calke, and weaze bise lets in thy hand the one faire and valauozy, the other black but of fineete peroure. Let thefe counfels (Lentulus comfort thee apply them not as outward platfers, but as intoard potions: which if they profit, mone thall bee more glad than Flaura, who witheth (if thee might in this barder treame) to biscover the bonoz of her thoughts, and the resolution of a friend if ought refts in me that may pleafure Lentulus co. mound it of Flama, as one knowing Lennulus befires are wholy honourable. Thus praying then mail bane eafe in thy passions, through end of thy louis. I will offer facrifice for the bealth, as the that feares ber owne prejudice mithout thy recoucty.

Thine, Flama of Rome, and the page

Po somer had Flavia ended her letter, but thee sealed it, and sent it away, and with as much speede as might bee, it was conneced to Lentulus, who reading the superstription, and perceiving it came from a woman, supposing it was sent from Terentia, started by in his bed, and rent open the seales: when he had read the contents, and saw it came from Flavia, noting the ertreamity of her love by the plaine difcouery of her passions: he last to bimselfe.

Unfull love that fettles the thoughts in crolling with contraries. Some thou piercell with belire, other with biloaine: infuling fundryeffecisin biners affects, I couet Terentia, and theis cruell, Flauia fauours thee, and thou art tred to others loues. That reffs in thefe extreames, but to carfe fancie, that maketh fuch a confused Chaosof ber follies. Dppole then reason against affection, & admit not of loues conclusions, bulesse they bee appropried principles. Thy thoughts are devoted to Terentia, and thee onely bouch fafes the the perdict of her eares Thou art more honourable then thee, of richer revenewes then her bowy can fatilite, having as many deferts, as the bath beauties : and pet cop dame as the is, the twits the with Vefta when God wote Venus is the goddeffe that heareth her oxilons. If thou ball this infight into her thoughts, why wrongest & thy felfe with fuch carelelle pallions: If thee bee foramage, let her flie and feeke fora Pielle that map pronemore gentle: Let her glozy like Narciffus in ber beapties: Loue can chaffice if it be but with felfelone. We no philicke Lentulus, but the confideration of this frowardnes. Let the daugs of Apollo ferue for others. not for the . Thouft out fancie by force, and letting Terentia at light efferme, make choice of Flauia: though the beenot fo beautifult, pet the is fecond to her in graces, and farre beyond ber incurtelies. Tie not thy felfe Lentulus fo Arichtipto a momans face beautie is but times flower, that as it is belt cate fo it fone inithereth: Like o colors that Phy dias orew in his pictures, which the wing most gloricus to the epe, was pet blemitht with everybreath. Venus was faire and wanton: Helenthe intracte of Greece, but alke Troy of her qualities. Abbut Terentia is aschaft, asthee is beautifull. 80

Sois Flauin to and far moze louing. Der birthis of higher discent, ber wealth more, ber bertues no lelle : but ber toue fuch as may challenge thy affection for bebt. Ab but Lentulus pet Terentia ber excellencie is moze, then can be thaken off with fo flight realons : and with that hee thrunke bowne into his bed falling to his old complaints: pet oid this Letter of Flauia Comewhat comfort him, and he found it his beff phylicke. But leauing bim in his bed, againe to Terentia, who felt the difquiet of ber mind as reffleffe. Foz the Senatours dayly repayzing to her fathers house, had no other table talke but the eloquence of Tully, some commending bis wit, other his ffubie, some his vertues, but all his speciall gifts of nature, that they put ople into the flame, and with thele praifes to fet on fire Terentias fancie, as nothing tumbled in her thoughts but the excellencie of Cicero: being to impatient, as the fought by all meanes politile to come to his fight, and to feed ber eve with that where with the had inchaunted her eares, finding no readie way to attaine the end of her defires, butill love, o like Mercury is full of thifts and hibtilty, deutled this plot. Tully being borne in a little Willage adiopning buto Rome, called Arpinatum, bled of ten to make his intercourse betweene the towne and the Ci-He for his pleasure: Withich Terentia bauing learned out. thought the fittell meanes to have a fight of ber Cicero, So that one day, to take the ayre, accompanied with her two friends, Flauia and Cornelia, baning but a page to attend bpon them the walked abjoadinto the fields. Paffing thus in merry chat towards Arpinatum, hauing fome glaunces at & ficknes of Lentulus, they had not walked aboue a mile befoze Flaura foted Tully comming fro Arpinatu to Rome, Allone as the had discribed him, and for certaintie knew that it was he: ponder quoth the comes that odde man of k ome. that excellent Datos Marcus Tullius Cicero, lohighly renowned through all our prouinces for his eloquence : note thall we heare from Lentulus, for they are the most familiar friends, and prinate companions in Rome, Terentia at this as one wakened out of a dreame, gave a fart, and caffing op her ege, espled the paramoz of her thoughts, which droue

115

her

Tullies Love

her into such an ertasse, that such arged with enermuch toy, she felt ar bracquaint of trendshing in her toputs. Exceeds thus perpleyed, Tully drawing me, and swing Terencia are companied with her friend Flania, gave thanks to opostur nitie, that she had so highly savored his striend Lentulus, as that he might now pleade so, his safety. Tully thus incompetering those three Romane damosels after a courteous Salve which made Terencia blush, he began thus to kord them.

This place (tweet Romanes) to aptly agreing to the persons, this valley relembling Idas, and Rome Troy, I cannot but bath with Paris at the fight of the fuch goddesses, whose vertice surpassed those, the shepheard sudicially survesed with his eye: humbly therefore saluting you as Dianaes darlings and beauties wonder, seing sofmall a traine sor such ercellent personages, although my affayes bee serious and of importance, yet please it you bouch safe of my service. I will attend on your walkes, and conduct you to Rome. Terentia seeding her eyes on the sweete of Tullies sace, and swilling bowne the next of his divine eloquence, staining her cheks with such a die, as did the faire Auxine of Carthage courted by Eneas, the made him this answere.

How you make compare (Cicero) of this valler, with the plaines of Troy, as little fkildin Geography, oz read in Homers Iliads, I leave without reply. For the Goddeffes that Paris incountred, we are equall with the in number, though far inferiour to them in beautie. For pour feruice we accept it, and for pour wages, pen thall have gracious lokes, and bartythankes. Seing therefoze wee are merrily minded. Suppose your selfe to bee the Shepheard, which of be all shall be pour Venus? & ot pou Madame quoth Tully aboue all therest: and woo so quoth Terentia ? because quoth Jullie, the leaft fie bath his fplene, the fmalleft ant ber gall, no haire fo little but bath his chacoow, and no man fo meane but he hath his enup: With then (quoth Terentia) I full dife cary you from the office of Paris, as a man partiall. But I pray thee (Cicero ) wherin thold I offend the, having never tene the befoze: In this quoth be, that Lentulus hath feene poartiffi that the blutht, and Flavia and Cornelia fell into a great

oreat laughter that Tully had forenably croff her out the thumbes. Tully profecuting his purpole went for ward thus. Foreknow Badam that Lentulus therichest Trophethat Fortune fets bp in the Theatre of henoz, made Gipinzacke of his libertie for the report of your beautie, leaving the warres, and the great hope of his fortunes, to have a fight of Terentia, you buising, not like Venus in curtefie, thouh in favours, baue counterperfed his fancie with milike, and for the home of his amourous thoughtshave powered him bowne heapes of bitter and displeating gall. The cruelty of Creflidancuer amated to the barry Troilus, as the fromne of Terentia hath vierff Lentulus, making lo deve a mound, as no philicke can cure, only pour fweet felfe, whole refolutions are fo farre from the properties of your face as it femes the Gods woonged nature, in placing an abamant bart within a Christall concrture. The Laties bearing Tully fo tharp, bit the lip, and Terentia graued: angry the could not bee as one that was over the floes in affection, but thus flee cut bim off.

A cannot indae (Cicero) by your sharpe and peremptorie invectives, byon fo fmall acquaintance, but you professe your felfe a Cinicke. If your philosophy be fuch, I will banke the blower aswell as Alexander, and thinke nothing ill that is Cooken from Diogenes. Howforner, or whatforner, Cinthe. or Stoicke, I argue thus against Lentulus, that boins made to Vefta are to be beloen inniolated, and refolutions to line a virgin are not to be broken with marfage. Cornelia & Flauia hearing them thus farre in by the eares, walked a little afibe, and left Tully to schole Terentia: who maintained her arguments thus. Suppole (Tully) it were notchaft thoughts but new loues that forced me to this refufall have not tres their Arings, and women their fancies & affections ? If his Autumne Chowers comming to late, caule not his crows to proue whats that to me: Loue confideth in buitie, the beart bath but one fring, the beauen one Sunne, and the Iris one property, and women but one love, and that I tell the Tully is placed on one that is as famous for his bertues, as Lentulus for his wealth and dignities. And what then thall Jaine.

a give, or he rightly challenge? Tully although he conceinen in his thoughts, that Terentia veloco great reason: pet bee would not give over the chafe fo, but mate this reply. Ah but Dadan, have an inlight into the depth of his affections. how hee aimes not at your treasures, heping to bee inriched by p our great down, for Lentulus is of the welthieft famis Iv in Rome, but levels at your bertues, the Sprens against whome he could not ble Vlilles policy. If affection be but a little past if love bath but drawne one line in your thoughts with his Benfil, walthe with fancie, blot out loues that bewes, and helpe Lentulus : who, if you remaine fo cruell, thall bee no moze Lentulus. If hee die for loue, how thall the Aretes Iwarme with fatues of his confancice If you bee knowne the chiefe Adoz of the tragedie, how will the people murmure of pour crueltie: Weighthis Badam, I fpeake as a familiar of Lentulus, and no enemy of Terentias honoz, If hee bee a Romane that Terenti: Loucs, let him sither bee moze honozable, moze ballant, moze affable, moze ercellent every way then Lentulus, nay more louing then the pore gentleman, elle discard him for aman infufficient to talt of Terentias beautie, of to be corrival with Lentulus in his fene. Terentia bat pellet at this ferce affault, hab not loue lait an inflance befoze her of her refolution, for the more Tully pleased for bisfriend, the more was Terentiachamored: fo that the made him this answere.

If I knew how to certifie Leculus of this vales discourse, he though highly reward you so, playing so well the Daator. But I martiell Ciceto, that being young, and of such eloquerice, we heare not of your lones: I seare you reach so bie, that you thinke no mathe in Rome honourable enough sor your paramour. Aftere I a man and had Tullies grace, as his tongue, I would plead for my kelle, and vie one word sor my friend, and two lor my kelle, and vie one word sor my friend, and two lor my kelle. So Padam (quoth hee) though men account ince a satisfield friend, and a dattering louer. But season: With some (quoth the) and that is without reason sor how might the Centernan, to whome I sind my selle afterionare, thinke himselfe wronged, if without cause caule I thould be inconstant. Grant I mp leue to b meancst citizen.a Monarch Chall not make conquest of my thoughts. Suppole fit it were vour felfe, and that Terentialoued Tully, could you broke another to brave you in your affection? I would Madam (quoth Tully)it were no supposition. Ind how then, quoth Terentia, thit were not : Then would I, (quoth be) become Esculapius to Lentulus, and sweare his difease should not be incurable, for I would confure you, by the rites of Lone, by the facred la wes of Venus, and by the affections that were imprinted in your thoughts, to bellow what veu would impart onto me, to mp onely iop Lord Lentulus. But women cannot make love poluntary. Tuth sas Dam . What cannot women box for loue? Any thing quoth Terentia, but change loue, Therefore concealing the party that I love, I will fav and fiveate Tully is my love, and fo far to Lentulus. With this Terentiablutht, and for berte griefethat Tully would not fee into her thoughts the teares Awdinher eves: tokich Tully spying, it so prickt him to the heart, that it never after was rafed out. To fmoth therefore his rough method with a few fine filed phrases, be falued the matter ti ue. It is (Dadam) impossible to datue fire downeward, or to make beaufe things to mount. Das ture full not be wronged, nor love drawne out by confirmint, therefore I wil leave any more at this time to fue for Lentulus: hoping the confideration of his Bartyzdome will at length make battery in the bulwarke of your breaft, and wheras you will (weare Tully is your lone: you know ( Dadam ) we have in our tivelue tables a lato against perfurie, but if pou bouch to grace me with that title, in all buffe 3 will reft your ever bounden fermant. Elbp thenfernant quoth the, let be to pomber two Ladies, that for want of a companion arefaine to make an amozous lanight of my page. Plania fixing they were halfe agreed fearing Tully by his eloquence had perfinaded Terentia, waged pale, and incountered them thus. What newes, quoth thee, both Lentulus winne of lofe? Deither Madam, quoth Tully, but his cafe hangs Will in suspence, the next court day I will end my Diation, and then the Judge thail gine berdict.

As they were readic to have gone for ward in some pleas fant prattle, they effeted a horseman making toward them with the greateft fperd that might be. Waben be came within ken, Tully knew it to be Lentulus man, and befoze be had leafure to doe his Meffage be bemanded how his maffer bib: Dalling ficke fir, quoth bee, and hath fent that you bee with him presently. Tally who was toucht to the quick with this newes, put fote in the firrope and mounted, pet as one fore getting bimlelfe bee bled thefe words. Bardon Lavies, if I palle manners and promile in leaping by with out leave, and returning in fuch post without your company. It is for Lentulus, whom you all love and therefore I hope to reft blame, leffe. Raw Babam Terencia, what that! I fap to Lentulus? Po moze quoth the, then what I faid to Tully but how con clubes Tully of his laft premiles : that, quoth bee. Terentia thall frame the argument, and fo, with this barke Enigma, he toke his leave of the Ladies: who after his departure, fell intalke of his perfection. Terentia fo bepely praising the man, that her companions calely perceived her loues, and Impled that in forfaking a flower, thee light byon a webe. Well, tracing fill amongs the Dedowes, they chanced in. to a valley most curiously becked with Floraes belicats, in which were fuch parietie of flowers, y Pature feemed there to have planted the Mozeboufe of her prodigallitie. Adiops ning tothisbally, was a pleafantriner e a groue, that gane a grace to Cloris excellencie: teliabled with the fituation of this place, as they paffed along, they met a thepheard, who boing reverence to the dames: Terentia demaunded of this finaine, what the name of this pleasant place was. Dabam (queth be) we thepheards here call it, the vale of Loue. And Johp fo, quoth Cornelia: Although Dabam, quoth bec, my flocke hath no guide but my bogge, and now in the yearing time the Wolues are bery buffe, pet, for that 3 fe pou ara Senators daughters, and withail, palling curtous, I will thew the reason, and with that, leaning on his staffe, the La-Dies litting botone began thus.

The Shepheards tale.

Tot many peres fince, bere in Arpinatu divelt a thep. beardeffe called Phillis, fo famous for ber beautie, o'the Schators formes (which you call Pretextati) not onely came to fede their eyes with her fauours, but to fatilfie their fancies with her loves: informach, that the was courted of mas ny brave Romane gentlemen. But the that held love at the faffes end, although her parents had left her rich, vet to bas nith Cupid with labor, the bouchfaft to be keeper of her own flocks, fearing the price of her beautle ( if thee thoulo marry with one of Rome ) would proque an enimp to her humble thoughts: Living as chaft as the was inrolled for a beffall, and quote by Dianafoz one of ber fpecial followers, ber ercellencie was bruited through al Italie. But the who feared to gaze at Carres, for Cumbling at Cones, laid her thoughts tow, and made choice of her company with country maids, and homely thepheards: vet was ber attire rich, as diverte that travelled this way, toke ber rather fora Opmph, the follower of some goddeffe, then a maide, and baughter of a poze fivaine. While thus there lined Lavie of the field, there was in the fame village one Coridon fonne to a fimple thep heard, who was a mercenary man, kept thepe for Vatinius the Senatoz o hath a farme hard by. This Coridon was a man of perfect perfection, his baire bong in treffes, and bis face was beautifuli : wife bee was, and wanted but wealth. to make him the chiefe of all the theubeards, being of equall peres almost with Phillis, some two peres eler, hee felt eptremely in love with Phillis. Enamoged was your Corido, and pentine, by his flock fate ruminating of his pattions, hee fmothed his love in filence, for that hee was the meanel of the fruines, and the miltris of be all. He late & fighed, a had none but eccho to pitty his plaints: his flocke left their fode to le their mafters forrow: his pipe ceaff, the folds were no more partakers of his melody, and all thefe thoughts and cares for Phillis. She will, and loving this wanton bal ly in the flame, loked narroluly into the perfection of the man whom the found worthy of lone, if his Warents bab not beine to meane, and his wealth none at all, suppreting

MI.

this lone with lacke, and quenching the fire with the defeats the found in Coridon. But Cupid that could not broke fuch exceptions, pitping the pallions of the pore Shen, heard pulled forth an invenomed boult, and piert Phillis to depe that Coridon began to be mafter of her thoughts: Rate the prail o his beautie, his behaufour, his wit, his ge-Aures, to that nothing was amille in Coridon. If he viped. Apollo was not like her Pan, ifhe lung, his boice was with out compare, if he told tales, they were excellent, if hee put forthriodles, they were witty. Coridon was the thepheard that Phillis of fancie, eno flocks might graze by bers, but thole of Coridon. This (Wiltris) canloue doe, who though bee beechoicely honouren in Rome, pet hee finds fome tole time to bally amonast thephearts. WHell, at last Coridon foted Phillis lokes, and got fome bope of fanour: fir ft bee courfed with hisepes, and after natures law fell to prattle; with interchange of glaunces, after from lokes to morts. which after their homely fathion was bere faithfully performed with lighes e teares, fuch perswalions as shepheards ble. Long bad they not tomed, but Phillis was willing, and the was wonne, that after faith and troth, as some as the thepheards could come together a feaff mas made, wee kept bolinap, and they were married : and because the Louers made this place the Concealer of their pallions, the thep. beards, for perpetnall memory of Phillis and Coridon, call this the bale of Loue, and in praise thereof, wee Country thephearts mode an Doe, which if it please you to flav. I will rehearle. The Lables valling willing, thus the thenbeard gan report.

The Sheepheards Ode.

Alking in a valley greene,
Spred with Flora fummers queene;
Where she heaping all her graces,
Niggardseemd in other places.
Spring it was, and heere did spring,
Allthat Nature forth can bring;

Groves of pleafant trees there grow. Which fruit and shadow could bestow: Thicke leaved boughes small birds couer. Till fweet notes themselves discover: Tunes for number feemd confounded. Whilft their mixture mulicke founded. Greeing well, yet not agreed, That one the other should exceede. A fweete streame here filent glides: Whose cleare water no fish hides. Slow it runnes, which well bewraid. The pleasant shore the current staid: In this streame a rocke was planted. Where no art nor nature wanted. Each thing fo did other grace, As all places may give place Onely this the place of pleasure. Where is heaped natures treasure, Here mine eyes with wonder staid, Eyes amaf d, and mind afraid: Rauisht with what was beheld. From departing were withheld. Musing then with found aduise-On this earthly paradife: Sitting by the river fide. Louely Phillis was descrides Gold her haire, bright her eyen? Like to Phabusin his shine: White her brow her face was faire. Amber breath perfumde the aire. Rose and Lilly both did seeke, To shew their glories on her cheeke. Loue did nestle in her lookes, Baiting there his sharpest hookes. Such a Phillis ne're was feene. More beautiful then Loues Queenc. Doubt it was whose greater grace, Phillis beautie, or the place.

Her coat was of scarlet red All in pleates, a mantle spred, Fringd with gold:a wreath of bowes, To checke the Sun from her browes, In her hand a shepheards hooke, In her face Dianes looke. Her sheepe grased on the plaines, Shee had stolne from the swaines: Vnder a coole filent shade. By the streames she garlands made, Thus fat Phillis all alone, Mill't the was by Coridon: Chiefest swaine of all therest. Louely Phillis lik't him beft . His face was like Phabus loue, His necke whiteas Venus Doue: A ruddy cheeke filled with fmiles, Such loue hath when he beguiles, Hislookes browne, his eyes were gray, Like Titan in a Summer day. A ruffet lacket, fleeeues red, A blew bonnet on his head: A cloake of gray fenc'd the raine, Thus tyred was this louely fwaines A shepheards hooke, his dog tide, Bag and bottle by his fide: Such was Paris, thepheards fay, When with Oenone he did play! From his flock straid Corndon. Spying Phillis all alones By the streame he Phillis spide. Brauer then was Floraes pride: Downethe valley gan he tracke. Stole behind his true-lones backe, The Sunne shone and shaddow made, Phillis role and was afraide. When the law her louer there, Smie fire did and left her feare. Cupid Cupid that disdaine doth loth, With defire strake them both. The swaine did woe, she was nife, Following fashion, nayde him twife: Much a doe hee kist her then, Maidens blush when they kille men: So did Phillis at that flowre. Herface was like the rose flowre. Last they greed, for love would fo. Faith and troth they would no mo. Forshepheards euer held it fin, To falle the love they lived in. The swaine gaue a girdle red, Sheefet garlandson his head. Giftes were given, they kifle againe, Both did smile, for both were faine: Thus was love mongst shepheards fold, When fancie knew not what was gold: They wooed, & vowed, & that they keepe, And goe contented to their sheepe.

euerp

The end of the Shepheards Ode.

Delighted with the description of the pastogal love, for that it touched her passions, gave him heartie thankes, and so the swaine twice his leave and eparted. Terencia and the rest hereupon growing into the effects of Love that keepes no proportion of persons, wandred on, talking towards the grove. And sor that the Sumue grew hote, and was risen to the highest Zenith of the heavens, seeking for shelter, they went into the grove, which was seated hard by the pleasant current: sinding out there a place condensent, these three Ladies sit them down upon the grasse, where delighted with the melodic of the birdes, and the colenes of the share, they fell a sleepe. Then lived in Rome, Various the Senatour, which was one of the most weather in possession of any that has beene Consult in the Citie, savonred enery way by fortune, had bee not beene thwarted by one grecuous & Dolefull milloztune. For this Vatiniusamonal many thildzen had his eldeft fenne, as first in birth, fo bzauell in proportion, of fuch exquisite lineaments, touching the cutivard Chape, as nature femo to have bene curious in ber workmanship: but otherwise be was so folish, and of so clownish capacity, that there was nohope of his future conceit:his name was after his father Vatinius. But foz because, neither by the dilligence of any master, not the flatterp of his friends, correction, orany other industrie, he could be mate capable of learning, or ciuilitie, bling fathis ons and words from a barth and groffe bovce, refembling rather a bruit beaft, then a reasonable creature bee was in derision called of every man, Fabius the fole. Vatinius greening that the Bobs had offred him this wong, for that the presence of Fabius was the continual course of his for rowes hee commanned that hee should age to his farme. and there live amonalt his therheards: This was no little content to Fabius as one that Deliahted moze in the nas ture of Clownes, and Bondlaues, then in the courtiv behas ufour of libertines, and Bentlemen. Fabius thus being in the Country, apriving himfelfe to all principles of bufvan-Drie, one day amonast the rest, walked forth, with a great bat on his neck, to oucrale his Fathers paftures : at laft, for that the Sunne was ble and thone hote, he went into the orougthen all oper-clad with leaves for it was farre fring. and feing a place wherein at pleasure to reft bimicife, bee flumbled (by fortune) on the fount where Terentia lay a fleepe, toho tohe Fabius efvied, being clad in a robe of Biffe, to thinne, as the whitenesse ofher fkm bid appeare, having her two companyons by her lide, he began as one amaged to behold. Leaning therefore on his great Bat, without bitring one word, hee fred in great admiration what thee thould be, as though he had never feene lo brane a creature before. Cowentring into his rufficall, and blunt under-Standing, (where never befoze could bee ingramen anyim) pression of honest civilitie, I a thought of fancie, which made him confede, in his groffe and marciall spirits, that this maide maide was the favzelt thing that ener could be censured by fight. In this humoz bee beganne to belkant of her feuerall beauties, praifing her haire to bee of colo, her forehead of Juozp, ber lips Cozall, and aboue all, ber two breates, which then began to appeare like pretie tender bubs, infuch fimple fort to biftinguifhing of her favours, that from a groffe Clowne, hie became to bee a Autge of Beautie: espetally coueting to lee her eyes, which heavy fleepe had thut bp, betermining often to have waked her, to have contented bimfelfe with their fights. But feing her moze faire then any creature that befoze he had feene, bee thought ber to bee feme Bodbeffe. Bauing thusfarre knowledge, that things binine thould bee reverenced more then humaine, and there fore burff not attempt to wake ber, but (although thee bad a found and long fleve) toke fuch pleasure in contemplating her perfections, that hee would by no belay bepart. At laft, after along fpace, Terentia awaked befoge any of the reft. lifting by her deowfie eves, the faw before ber. Fabius lead ning upon his faffe, whereof beeing balle amazed, thee afked of him. Fabius , what feekell thou beere in this groue? Fabius, who as well by his countenance, asclemencie, and for the nobility of his house, as the riches of his father. was generally knowne of all the Romanes, made no an-(were to Terentia but feeing ber epes open be began to lok feetfaftly boon them, feeling a pleafing content to iffue from those Lampes which sparkle as the very flame of Lone: infomuch, that Terentialeeing bim gaze fo earneffiv fearing the furby clowne might offer ber fome violence, wakened upher companions, and farting by, faibe, Fabius fareinell. And although Terentia refuled, as beeing furvilled with great feare of his rufficall disposition : pet be would not forfake her till be had brought her to her fathers house, where blantly leaving the Lady, hee went home to his fathers. faping, hee would not returne any moze into the Country. Although it greeued his father to have his forrew continually before his eyes, yet wondring what the occasion of this Arange motion thould meane, bee was content to let him remaine at home in the Citie. Loues arrowes thus piercing

193

into

Into the heart of Fabius, whereinto never before any civill thought could enter, made such a metamozohosis of his minde, that not onely his father and friends, but all Rome began to wonder at his sudaine alteration : for he required to be apparelled as the fonne of a Senator, which his father with all diligence performed. Then frequenting the most courteous and honeft pong Gentlemen of the Cittie efpecis ally luch as were amozous bee ( to the great affonishing of all) not onely learned bis letters, but became bery knotous, and arein to have deve infight into Philosophy. to befliffull in Mulicke to rive a Horle, and to be expert in all gentle and manlike activitie to conclude, in thoat space, bee was one of the brauest vong men in Rome.

Here by the way (courteous Ladies and braue aentle women) what Mall I fap of the transformation of Fabius only inmp opinion this: That the high pertues of the beauens infused into his noble breft, were imprisoned by the envious wath of fortune within fome narrow corner of his beart. whole bands went alunder byloue as a Lozd to mighty for fortme: Cupid the raifer bool lep thoughts difperfed those bertues into enery part of his minde, obscured before with the ecliple of bale thoughts. Let be then thinke of love, as of the most purest passion that is inserted into the hart ofman, Wiell, leaning Fabius frutious how to excell in all laudable pertues, againe to Tully who arrived in post hast to the lode aina of Lentulus, and found him palling licke, pet fom what comforted at the fight of Cicero, as of him that he belo most Dere in the morto. Tully feing him ill and full of passions, butft not tell him that he had fene Terentia, leaffer fro ward answere thould anomnet his milery, concealing therfore bis Chatthathe had with the Ladies, at last Lentulus the too him letter of Flania, toherenpon they fel to discourse of her beauties and pertnes, how the was not much inferior to Terentia in fayour, but far beyond ber in bonours, dif courling to long from point to point, that after a volp of bao ken lighes tempered with fome teares befell a fleepe. Tully glad that be take a nay fole foftly out of the chamber, and being by bimfelfe, calling to mind the words of Terentia, began

began to enter into this combate with himfelfe,

So plaine are the alpeds of thefore appointing Cars in fome mens nativity, as they force fortune mauger ber otene partable nature to be confrant. Among all that have being borne in pose village of Arpinatum, thou mateft (Tully) fap, that the planets have bene pleafing, and the befires fanourable, who the forme of a page farmour, art in hove to make thy house equall with the most in Rome. Weature but the bonour and inege of the fortunes : the family bafe, pet art thou a companyon with Senators, and men of gramel account in the Cittle. Honour treades on the heele, and pianitie dauncethattendance at thy lokes: but love: Cicero. that deifie, that divine effence, that fealeth by content in all effates, he floveth at thy fromme, prefents the wreathes of mirtle, that thou may ff enter into Paphos without checke. Terentia the wonder of Rome, Patures Daragon, the refined beautic of the beauens, thre that femeth to glaunce at the Pretextati; thee that makes no account of the miracle of our time, Lozd Lentulus: the, Cicero commaunded by lone, peldes ber felfe captine to the fonce of a pore countrep billad ger in Arpinatum. Then Tully fireto Venus temple with roles: fab there is no fount but Alcidation, no bill but Erecimus, no bird but the Doue, no god but Cupid, Lofe not oppostumete, take her by the foschead, let not lip occasion, for the glides alway like a thadow: nor Love for thee banges at the heeles of Time. Dow Terentia hath put the prontin the fire, firite then while it is hote, pay her cowne poundes of love for brams of fancte: for, in marching with the brughter of a Senato, thinke, it prelageth thou that be a Sena toz, fo thait thou game, at one time bottoz, bignitie, wealth, and beauty: but with that, tole the faith Tully, the faith thou half bowed to Lentulus, who thutteth by his fecrets with p heart, and reffeth his thoughts on the bolome. Whit thou prefer bonor before the friend, or wealth before confcience: My Tully, if thombe the man that Rome womenth at for the eloquence, be also the man they that canonic for the perfues. Weathe to but a bautor blage, wealth is but a fikle factour of Fortune, blandle is hamited by entip: but frendingpe

80

that

that is the pretions treasure, that neither Time nor For tune can violate. The but Terentia will never lone Lentulus then Tully hate thou ener Terentia. 3 am a man and fubied buto loue, afinell as Lentulus : So art thou a man. and being balfe to the friend art bnivozthe all loue. Aban-Don (Tully) thefe vaine imaginations, count Terentia foule_ beformed, bicious, and what not ? as long as one warke of loue leth raked by in the cinters of the thoughts : e as long as Lentulus loues her. hate her for the felfe, and loue her for Lentulus, Setting downe his reft at this period, be went into the chamber to fee if Lentulus were awake, but finding him Gillfaff a flepe, he went towards the Cavitoll. Inhere he met with Flaminius father of Terentia, who demans bed bery heartely how Lentulus bio. Cicero with a daye figh falo, paffing ficke. Tabereof (quoth Flaminius ) groines the difeate? I heard Afclapo judged his ficknes to bee moze tall. Tully thinking to let all on the dice, not respecting his owne foule, but his faith to his friend, beganne thus, Grave Senatoz, I net not rehearle Lentulus birth, as being a Citizen , noz his revene los and polletions long knowne to enery man noz his honours ended in bidozies: for the Parthians are sufficient enforce of tis well bischarged bignie ties and vallors. Lentulus graced in the wime of his vouth with these fauors, hearing of the beautie of a Roman Laby. left the warres, and came to Rome, where courting his sei-Arefle not with wanton Boems, but with tearmes of marriage, befound her froward, and his love batht in the prime. The impression of her beautie graven with tw beepe a characer was to faft roted in his beart, to bee thrust out with beniall: pet Lentulus to content her, playes like the Bhenir, burnes in his owne perfumes, rather withing to bie, then to contrarie ber resolution. This is the cause that first brought Lentulus to his bed, and this (ere long) will being bim to his grave. And who may it be (quoth Flaminius, ) of whatfas mily of what beautie, of what begree, that can, or bare beny Lozo Lentulus? Is benot mighty, and may commaund by force, tobat be cannot obtaine by intreatie: will not the foulviers at his beck rife in armes: Feare not the con fuls them-felues fo wong Lentulus: Doth not all Ronie baun their thoughts at his lokes ? Ah milerable father that harbours fuch a baughter and ffubborne bulwife, that benies lo braue a Romane, Infrientifip Tully, tel me who it is: Cicero willing to put a four to a fre horfe, and to lofe his ofone content to win his friends quiet, told him flatly it was his daughter Terentia : and for profe, be the toed him the Letters that pall bet wirt Lentulus and her. Allone as her father had read the contents, as a man halfe mad be fell into furious and frans tick tearmes, exclaiming against the head from burnour of folith Terentia After he had breathed out the heate of his choller, be fell to bee fome what appealed, and bad Tully bome to Supper, promiting all thould fort according onto Lentulus minde. With that Departing from the Capitell. Tully and hee went home to his house, where the Coke bees ing fome what flacke, Flaminius hearing his baughter was al alone in a garden be wifhed Tully to try ber once againe. and to perfuade ber by all possible meanes to grant to the request of Lentulus, Tipon this Tully went into the garden, lobere finding Terentia litting folitarie in an Arbos by to the bard eares in a bumpe, he wakened ber out of ber Bufe thus. Veftas cheife paragon, and Venus new entertained barling, you Madam Terentia I meane that fit in a Dufe: are you offring offons to Diana for your chaffity, of thanks to Cupidfor your loues: or what are you thinking on when pour thinke on nothing ? Terentia turning ber bead and fee ing Tully all alone, blufft more then Cynthia bid when the wantond with her faire faced thepheard, pet welcoming her loue with a fmile. We toke him by the band and made bim this animere.

Pour subtile salotation, concluding Vesta & Venus in one Dilemma, commande me answer, that I was boing my devotion to both offring prayers sor my old thoughts, a chanks sor my new loves: and scarce had I sate, gramercie to the Boddesse, but you must come (Cicero) to make my thankes prodigious: sor my thinking, when I thought of nothing, it was of mens loves which are lighter then the slame, and so her saded then stall of lightning: But I pray you say, what wind hath driven pout nto this coafte Warry (Babani) the berp liabesthat file from Lentulus breaft greiv tofo great a Come that I was blown bither to feeke Welter for the tems reft. Dou have nothing (auoth Ferentia) but Letulus in your mouth: I way you fay, how fares the Bentleman ? Il Das Dam (quoth Tully) enery way, for his diet is bab, in that his Romacke is naught, and his health is doubtfull, in that his thoughts are disquiet : and ( Badam) it reffs in you to face fo bonozable a Bentleman, not onely from ficknelle but from forcow: Eneas was a fraging Troiau, anderile perfored and banifut even from the rumes of Troy, pet Dido the fas mous Carthage Quene mate him her paramour, Demophoon apirate, a robber in Greece, caft up as thip to ache on the those pet entertained by Phillis, Phao a ferriman, a Claue: pet fauoured by Sapho. Leniulus, the hope of the Romanes, more beautifu'l then Eneas, more couragious then Demophoon, and moze hono cable then Phao moze louting then them all rejeacoby Terentia his neighbor and familiar. Think not Terencia but love as be bath roles, to be, bath netties, as he hath perfames, to be bath hemlecke, and hole ding fauoz, be claspeth reuenge, as ready to pierce, as to pas cifie. If pou procure Lentulus heath, Cupid hath power to inforce pour dispaire, and to cause your love to be as fichle to you as you are froward to him. Then (Dabam let mee bee the medlenger of life, and from your lock felfe carp fuch conferuesto Lentulus, as maprecouer bis bealth, and increase pour bonours. This discourse of Tully did but let Terentias beartmore on fire. For bearing the pleafant harmony of ber Cicero, fire like dof the muliche as of the Syrens melody, and fo intangled per felle with many new conceined fancies, inforuth that forgetting whole daughter thee was, the burft forth into their tearmes.

Dio I not Cicero tell the fwirt Arpinatum & Rome, that love hath but one Cel, wherem to place the Idea of the party loved will thou have me like the Camelion to have many colours, or like Helena, to entertaine many loves? I know Lentulus dignifics are beyond my degree, that his honours are more then my fortunes, that his love is great, and fo I

bola

hold him the fecond in my mod fecret thought, though first he cannot be and that he craves. I hou doof wing water out of the flint, fire forth of the bry fands, and immodely from her that hath ener beene honoured for chaditie: fo that by waitlede perswasions for thy friend. I am forft to say thou art the friend that Terentia bath cholen amongst all the worthy Komans : Befoze I fato thee Tully, I loued thee, and now That fettled my affection, and then we engle mee with dif courtede : but either ceafe from intreating for Lentulus, 62 loke tole me worfe then Lentulus, And with this bluthing at her owne overmuch loves, the power forth fuch abounbance of teares, as well micht beway the finceritie of ber -affections, Tully griening to fee the goodeffe of his thoughts in this pattion, antwered her mildly, thus, Blame mee not (Terentia) if I plead for Lentulus, feing his fortow, andentring into mine owne promife. Than friendlip, is no fluce. ter tewell, then how can I but labour ere I lofe fortch a paise? Butleting Terentia hath pouchfafed offe meane a man as Tully, whole honours onely hangs in his fludies: love being the firidest league of amitic, and no fuchfriend thip, asis marriage: Thowe by the Romane Gods, ever to been outifull feruant onto Terentia; and with my lovalite lo to requite her fauours, as Rome thall more admice my affections, then they have wondeed at my eloquence: pet with this Prousfo(mp fwet Terentia) that although 3 pres ferre thy favours before mine ownelfle, pet if thou canft, Ariue to lone Lentulus, which if either the gobs, loue fortune or the felfe can bring to paffe. I will with more owne prefus dice, conquer mine owne thoughts to latiffie the content of Lentulus. As Terentia was ready to rerly, one ofber fa. thers feruants came to requeft Cicero to come to Supper. who taking his leave of Terentia, went into her father Plaminius, who atting bown to Supper, paffed away the time in ogbmary talke. Their repaff being taken, Flaminius calling Tully on the one five, demannded what his daughters answere was: Beremptor (pucth Tully) Will to hold Lentulus inmilike. Then pouthall heare (quoth her father) what I will fav. and forevort to Lentulus; fo calling for Terentia Terentia, they tozée being together, be began thus.

I know not how Terentia to infinuate my Exordin, whe ther friendly to persimate with a smile or fatherly to atmowith with a frowne, thy follies are fo great, and my care fo tender. Rome hath bitherto admired the bertues, and I have praffed the obedience : thou hall beine counted bonous rable and chaft, wife to efchew wantonneffe, but never cove. to be thought difoaineful: and thall now all thefe graces endin Difarace : Then Terentia mateff theu repent bereafter. and I power forth prefent fortowes. I freake thus, for that I heare in this Citie what maketh me to gricue. I map force the to bluth. They fay Terentia is beautiful. a proud, witty. and onerweening, having cop bilbaine crept into the place of curteous befire : thus men far that enuy thy follies, & gricue at Lentulus fortunes Row Daugher, thou feelt the marke 3 aime at a mailt judge of my thot by the levell : Lentulus is fallen into a feuer, which Asclapo that famous Philition of Patras censures to be mortall. The fromarones was the efficient of the bileafe. Thow & benieft cure of the malady. Uns atured girle that neither weighelt of thine oton bonos, noz his mileries. Lentulus requires Terentia in marriage:let bs make compare of the parties, and fo examine the cause of the Denfals. The is descended from the Lentuli & Emilij two hous les that cucr have bin the props of the Romane dianifies, his bonours are great, as Proconfull in his youth against the Parthians: his fortunes mighty boubled with his conquells and bidogies : Bis renene wes fuch as be map with Craffus maintaine Legions. If like Venus Darling thou feekelt to feet thine epe, his favour is more then his that pleased Cymthia .3f thou coueteff a Souldier, Lentulus in Rome, is as Hector was in Troy. If a Courtier, who branes it foin Italy : To conclude, if Terentia couet to love, there is none fo fit to love within the Romane Empire as Lentulus. Wither . as l'erentia is but p daughter of a meane Senator, her boins riecanno be much, for that her fathers wealth is not great: Beautiful the is, & fo are many in Rome, who are of meas ner parentage. Der glozies are but fortunes pelle, that floziff in the morning, a fade before night. What then can moue Terentia.

Terentia to oppose perfelle against Lentulus: unlesse the fatally prefageth her owne discredit, a the ruine of her fathers boule: If then daughter & art chilo to Flaminius, 3 charge the by the first Law of nature, which Whilosophers call Regins amor, a kingly loue: De a mate, by that holy fiers of Ve-Parif beautifull, by Venus teitierif a Romane, by thy com. tries lone o loues Lentulus which if thou refuse to performe. thy father thall curse thee. Vesta shal that thee from her tems ples. Venus from her fauois, and the country from inioping the finete content of honour, and then make the outcall of all her Romane birgins. More are my reasons to alleage. then the reasons able to contrarie: but omitting all and fave Terentia fering ber father in fuch a choller and that he inas induced buto it by Ciceroes perfugious, in a furp began thus franticke. Toeny not, but fathers challenge love by nature, and obedience by butte, and both thole Sir ( bove ) Thane euer verformed:if not, Treffforowfull, and craus pardon: but in love parents have no priviledge: for the liking of the Father is no contract of the daughter. Vews conclusions arow not of parents promites, nor can affection belike the fire froken forth of a flint: for loue is chofenby the eye, and confirmed by the heart, womens thoughts are not the spoiles of Mars, not is the battell of fancie fount with the (word, but with the fences, and loues arrowes are appointed by fate and fortune. Weigh then Terentia, who hath not her loues in hand, but in her heart, and thereunte none can make breath, but fuch a one as the pleafing confreliation of the farres have appointed. 3 doe not deny the excellencie of Lenculus, as well in exterio; thew of honours, wealth, dignities, & proportion, as in the interior bertues & perfections of the minde, and that he merits a Lady of farre moze effeme then Terentia:but I knownot what contra rie afpect, either of the planets in our nativities, or of loves in our thoughts, or of fortune in our resolution to like, bath croffed his defire, and my fancie, but of all the Romane Bentlemen, Leannot fancie mo Lord Lentulus, Crefsida confest Troylus was the better Enight, and pet the Greeke beld her louely in his tent. Sith then affection growes from befire, and befire is theo to beffinh, feeke not Dir to maing water out of the pumer, or to couple the Doule and the Cles phant at one fall, to bnite thole lones that Venus inher 5 p nodehouse hath expelly countercheckt. For to auniwere pour objection, Terentia cannot force her felfe to love Lentulus. She thus concluded with a fein teares, her father Beparting from her with a frowne, told Tully that not reas fon was fufficient to induce his daughter to bee affectionate & therefore that he wilbed Lentulus to appeale his passions. and to falue fuch impossibilities with patience: whereupon they, after change of falutations a common curteffes, parted with a friendly farewell. Tully athis home comming, res nealed buto Lentulus the whole discourse, how Flaminius had fearcht into the best of Terentias thoughts, both with plaulible per imalions, and inforced realons, and could find no other conclusion, but that the could not fone Lentulus. Although this nelpes pierced the perie center of his heart. as mortally, as if bee had beene wounded with the ffing of Alpes: vet cheering himselse a little, beefat up, and in his plune mind haufing a bout or two with fancie, he gave her to beepe a reule, that bee belo affect at the fwords point. But Tully, who betweenefrient thip and love felt a furious combat, allured with the beautique perfection of Terentia e forbidgen that fanour by the entrae amitie tee had bowed anto Lentulus, entredinto lo deve a melancholly, that not able to matter his pattions, bee fell ficke, and kept his bed. Lentulus feing his Tully thus diffreft, griened at his frieds milfoztune, and chered by himfelfe, that he might femiohat comfort his Cicero, that ne foly was croffed with a diffent pered ficknes. We fought by Philicke to fearch out the na. ture of the bifcale : but Afclapo could not bemethe cause by the effects:he fought by intreaties to wieff out the occasion of fo fudame a forrow, but in baine. Tully was too fecret and filent to make any thew of his lones, though bee bought fuch fecrefie wich beath. This ariened Lengulus, who faling himselfe enery day to amend, perceined that Cicero dayly wared morfe and worfe. Linguing thus in inward pallions,

ing he is onely Lentulus: Daughter, what answeres

Terentia

Terentia that twee it discourteously at Tullies hand, that he thould some her Father, to insome her to some Lennulus, seeing she had onely denoted her selse as his, howsomer softime thould oppose her selse. To ease her mind of some choller that boyled in her secret thoughts, the take pen and inke, and whose him a letter to this effect.

Terentia, to Marcus Tullius Cicero, health.

my thoughts are fecret and loves extreame, fo is bus kindnes bitter, and the more bneafic borne. Thou plap, eff (Tullie) with me as do the Leopards with their keper. that ever wong them most that give them greatest fore of fooder. Are thefe Venus laives to pay bonny with gall to make robs of netries, for garlands of Roles, to hate them most, that love most? The ingratitude of Lully hath brainne Terentia into this choller, And if I write fharply, blame me not that am bico to throwolp. Before Feuer faw thp face I allowed the fauour, and onely bearing the bertues with mine eare. Ircuiffred them by deeply in my heart. Terentia hath beine courted of many pet neuer made account of any; Sunday have fought my lous but they have returned with loffe, Lentulus the terrour of the Parthians, the bonour of the Romanes, and the friend bath long woed, but what bath he twon? enely Tully hath obtained, that which to many have milt and vet be deales with Terentia as crabbedly as the b. fed him courteouffy. Do louers for filhes proffer Scorpions? or doe they like the fervent, fling han that cheritbeth him by in his bosome? I feke to favour Tully, and he importunate, fues for fauoz for Lentulus, Ert thou lo deepe a Philosopher, as to deme friendfhip aboue martage, or faith aboue fancie, or the Terentia leffe then the Lentulus Afit belo take her that Terentia, to much wronged, scornes not both the and Lentulus. Womens thoughts confifts oft in critemes, and. they that lone mot, if abused, hate mott deadly : feare this, and beware of my fromne: as vet there is but one wainckle in my browe, but if it once piwae full of angry forrowes, it will be to late to take holo of occasion behind: Thou art forewarns, be before arm s, and so farewell.

Thy Terentia, if thou wrong not Terentia.

Fter the had written this Letter, the caulo it to be connected by Eutrapilus to Tully, who reading the contents, found not a falue to cure his malady, but that Terenria rubbed the fear afreth, by thaking him op fo tharply, yet coueting rather to die with an honozable mind to Lentulus. then with a discredit to entop beautifull Terentia, be laid bis head on his pillow, and with many lighes bewraide the depth of his forrolves. Hauting laide his letter at his beds head, ouercharged with many cares, poze I ully fell afleepe, and to fobainly, that Lentulus, by the help of Eutrapilus got to have a fight of his Letter. Affone as the Gentleman fato bow beeply Terentia was affected to hisfriend, and perceis ued by the circumstances, that he chose rathet to die, then to fallifie bis faith, fuch a fecret lone towards Tully fo pierced the closet of his bonourable thoughts, that he fell to conceipt but meanly of Terentia, and to with that his friend Cicero might both recover his healt , his love. Pow began that fancie of Lentulus to freeze, that erft was lo great a flame, and be that like the Salamander belighted to live in the fire, began to feare to accedere ad ignem, leaft he thould Calefcere plus quam fatis. Dow be called to mind the refolution of Terentia, tempered with frowardnesse, and with this be did proportion the bertnes of Flauia, mired with courtelle, finding the favour of the one, answerable to the beautie of the other, then the faith of his friend, his ficknes andertreame forowes. Thele weighed with deepe confideration, he boted to fekeby all meanes how to win Terentia wholy for bis friend Cicero . In this humoz he conveted this Letter under his bets head, and refted filent till occasion might offer bim opportunitie to discover the verfection of his amitie. Thus grew Lentulus at one time from his licknes & his lone, walhing abroad, and billeing Flaminius, who intertained him in allfumptuous maner. But Lentulus feeing the thie Las bies. made no thew to Terentia, not fcarce glanced a loke boon ber beautie, but onely courted the Ladie Flauia, whom be found fo agreeable and plyant to his futtes, that Terentia and Cornelia might easily fee how teepely they were linked in the league of affection. Leaning Tully thus ficke on his bed. Lentulus in Iwet content with Flauia, Againe to our nem fransformed Fabius, toho in this time proued one of the brauest gentlemen in Rome, and finding a restlesse passion in his minde to; the beautie of Terencia, as having contimually before his eyes the Idaa of her perfon, feing by her meanes hee was metamozpholed and brought to this perfection making the force of his love printe to his father Varinius he wasnot onely prailed for his god choice, but willed to go forward in the obtaining of his affections. Where bon, not willing to make a long barueft of a little crop, to prevent (as be thought) that none Could cut the graffe from binder his fete, hee went to Terentias Father, and bluntly craued his daughter in marriage. He knowing him to be of bonourable parentage, and of rich reveneives, freing the ivould not condifcend onto Lentulus, gaue bim his franke and will, if he could creepe into his baughters fanour, inho taking the abuantage of the time went to find out Terentia loho as then was very melancholly. fitting with Flauia and Cornelia, talking of plicknes of Tully. As they were thas in chat.came in Fabius, who they araight knew, a wondzed at his ffrang alteration: be, to thew bee could as well court it as the braneff young gentleman in Rome, beganne thus curteoully to falute the Ladies, Maruell not (Ladies) if a country (waine prefume to attempt & prefence of fuch care ercellencies, fæing Oenones thepheard burft with hisepe furuer the beautie of divine goddeffes, and thep to thew thep twere as gracious and full of fauours, game him the greatelt minion that was counted the fwetelt paragon of the world. Earthly creatures you bee, faire Romans, but heavenly faces, whole lokes lighten bluine influence into p thoughts of fuch as dare to contemplate your perfections. I freake this as being the man, that from the cart, live in the court thus metamospholed by your supernatural beautics. For which favour I am come induty, to rest a bounden votarie to your sweet selves. Terencia was so pensue sor Tullies passions, that the would make no answere. But Cornelia, whom already Cupid had set on sire with Fabius seature, the returned him this reply.

meta

I remember Fabius, that litting in the groue by Arpinatum, a gentle swaine much like your selse in proportion, though not in properties, swing we were senderly guarded with a Page, conducted us home to Rome with his iriendly company: if it be your selse, had wee as brave a Lady as Helena was, were she in our power to bestow, we would make you master and sole possessor of her beauties, so to reward your courtesse. Fabius swing y marks so faire, thought not to lofe his fhote, but aimed his level thus.

And for that cause (Ladies) is Fabius come, that his mee d may not want his merite, glad that Venus bewes downe fuch favours, and epoztumitie fuch thowers of and fortunes to finde you all bere in fo fit a time. Fo; know (honourable Komanes) that for my groffe and rube nature, hating the ciuill behautour of the Cittie, I was furnamed Fabius : in which obscure life, I lived having my senses eclipsed with folly, till the gods grudging at natures spight, fent you thice to be ministers of happines. For comming into the groue inhere you lay all allege, calling mine eye on the beautie of Terentia fuch a beepe impreffion was figured in my minde. that I felt an bnacquainted motion, with a milde reuerence to thinke wel of her perfection: farveying her fingular beauties. I fell fo farre in love with her excellencie, that from the country I came to the Citie, and how fince by ber gracious fight I baue metamozphofed mp felfe, pour own eares, and the monder of Rome is belt able to witnelle, Then Ladies, I count the renewing of my life to come from the feature of Terentia, and that the not as Diana changed me froa man to bee a beaff, but contrary, full of fauour, bath retucet mee from a fenfuall beaft, to a perfect reasonable man. How ben to then I ought to be bowed to ber, whole fight is the welfpring of my happines, let the greatnes of my benefit make manifeff:

manifest: in so much, as feeding my thoughts with the contemplation of Terentias beautie. I have bin thus transformed but withall, fo furpifed with her lone, that as I have gaind a fecond effence by her fivete felfe, fo 3 have loft my felfe within the Laberinth of her lokes, that I remaine her captine while it pleafeth ber to grant me liberite. We then (brane Roman dames) impartiall domers of my fute, whe ther my beferts crave not love, that thus have been changed for her loue. 99 parents are Senatours, my reuenelves inferiour to none: old Vatinius glad of my choice, and Terentis as father thrice happy if his daughter might like of Vatinius. now refts it onelpin Terentias power to make me bleffet, or infortunate, At this discourse of Fabius, the Ladies were affonified, and Terentia galled to the quicke with this bes maunde belde ber tongue, till Cornelia and Flauia, loking earnelly byon her, alked her what answere the made to Fabius, Such queth the as 3 returned to Lentulus : for know fir if either the honoz of a fouldier, the dignity of a Romane, the reveneles of a Senators fonne, or the depe impreffion of fancie might haue Dawne Terentia, to loue, 3 hab ben ere this the wife & paramour of Lentulus, But not the courage of Hector that won Andromache noz the wildome of Vliffes that intangled Calipfo, nor the beauty of Priamus for that brew Greece in armes to Troy: thefe perfections if co. bined in one man Chould not mone Terencia to liften to the alurements of Venus: not & I make light efteme of Lentulus, 02 that 3 holde small account of Fabius, as two chiefe mperoes ofour Romane Bentlemen: but that either mp boines are refolued to Vefta,ogif Cupid hath takenmee by the bele, it was befoze Lentulus came from Parchia, oz pou fro Arpinatum: fo that to conclude howfoener it is, I cannot become affectionate to Fabius. At this reply Fabius frodo amaged as if be had been an bowel-come gueff at the feaff of Perfeus, tobich Cornelia noting, Déply in lone with Fabius, the tolo him thus. Poz may pon (Fabius) think much at this repulle, fith Lentulus and pou are in one predicament, nom both become gainers in libertie, that baue bene lofers in loue:and either get the willow garland and fo mourne to: pour Ladies frowne, or lekke a Piffrist that may she wyou more favour: for as for Terentia she hath chosen, and none must please her but Drators. If there we (Fabius) but one sun that is thought the beautie of heaven, yet there bee planets, that though not in thine, yet in instuence, are as vertuous. What there bee Ladies (Imeans) of such course dye as my selse and Flavia, that when Terentia is once married lake for hulbands. Fabius hearing Cornelia thus pleasant, noted this quip, y none must please her but Drators, which made Terentia bluth for anger, and Fabius to make this answere: I know no Drators in Rome quoth he, whose yeres are answerable to Terentias thoughts but onely Marcus Tullius Ciceto, a sitte he, I sweare by the fitch that gave him his swamme, Terentia thall be Pistrisse of a goody Cotage in Arpinatum. Terentia hearing Fabius to give Tully the frampe, answered thus.

3h 2

Pour

Die moze bis foztune, if it be he whole vertues hath made him Matter of his ofme befires: for his lands in Arpinatum, as they be little, pet thall his lacke be counternailed with his lones : and if hee bath not one to inrich him with down, vet I may perhaps content him with beautie. And therfoze Fabius, to take a wap al suppositions, it is Tully, and none but Tully that thall emoy Terentia, And quoth Fabius in great choloz, noz Tully noz none befides Tully, but Fabius thall enter Terentia. Whereupon beparting without taking his farewell going mto ber father, biscourfing buto him that Tally mais a man that by banahter had chosen for her bulband, friearing thathis fwozd, ere it were long thould ente their loues. Although Flaminius were graued, pet he fought to pacifie Fabius,but in baine: for bee flung out of the borges in a rage, and went to Miloes boule to fete Tully, Wibere breathing out many dispightfull threats against the Dras tour it come at laft to Lentulus care. Tho now to make manifest the beepe affection be bare to Cicero, trouping bemfelle with a crue of the Presextats, and chiefe Romanc Gentlementhat hab beine foulbiers, and trained by with bin in the warres, be went to fecke our Fabiusand found hon with tertains his companyons about the Capital Len POSS tulus not beoking the beane of any, as carrying the heart of a Conquerer, fingled out Fabius, and after fome wordes. they fell to blomes : But Fabius part were the weaker, fo that many were wounded, and some flaine. Upon this, the nert day parts were taken, the people began to mutiny, and to fall to intestine and civill farres : that as in time of Sylla and Marius, to the freetes were filled with armed Souldis ers. The Senators fieing what bloudy fratagems would infue of this frife, if it were not pacified, fent for the Confuls, and charged them to raise by some of the Legions, and bring Lentulus, Tully, and Fabius the next day to the Ses nate house with Terentia, and her father. They obeving their commaund, put this charge in execution, and lo qualifring somewhat the fury of the people, brought these three weers with Terentia, before the whole fate of Rome. Where being arrived, Tully fearefull of nature, and ficke. pet somewhat Arenathened with the light of his Wiffriffe. being glad Lentulus was his friend in his loue, after due reuerence, began thus.

Tullies Oration to the Senate.

Onicript Fathers, and arane Senators of Rome. I was borne in Arpinatum, of bale parentage, the fire of the Ciceroes that ever pleaded in Roftris, or bare title in the citie. If then adnanced by your fanoss to thefe fortunes, I should aspire without proportion to climbe beyond my des gree let me bee the first and last, whose presumption that! grow to this prejudice. The temple of lanus in Koine bath her gates thut, the freetes are full of armed men the frones of the Capitall blusheth at the blown of Romans theore as gainst her walles : and all this mutinie (ery mine abuerfaries) growes from Tully. Bot that Tully was then out of his bed, but that men of poze families, lifted by to honour, are fwieft bitten with enuy. I appeale ( grane Senatours) for my life to vour owne cenfares, if ever A baue not beine more carefull to profit my Country, their befirous of prefers ment for my labours. But what then fay the people is coufe offuch broples ? Terentia the baughter of Flaminius , the firebrand that let Troy to cinders. Beautie is like to bring Rome to confusion: for the greatest houses and families are benided the Lentuli and Vatinii and this for Terentia. Let the cause be examined before the Senators, and as thep beare fo let the bome: Lentulus chofen by the Senate, was fent Captaine oner many Legions againff the Parthians. where be tred fortune to his thoughts, by his great bidos ries and conquests let by Trophes of Romane chivalrie. Returning with glozy to Rome, having fet in his place Lepidus he was enamoured, not onely of the beautie, but bertues of Terentia, the fame of whole excellencie was fored as mongt the Parthians. Coueting to match with fo bonozable a Laby, be courted ber, but in paine: not that the difpained Lentulus, but that thee had fired ber fancie befoze thee faw Lentulus: and of platforme of love is able to receive but one impression. If honors, if conquest, if parentage, if revenews, If cozage, if gods of fortune, body, or mind, pright bave won Terentia, all this was buited in young Lentulus. But lone that liketh without exceptions, had overbard ber beart with fuch former fancies, as the paffionate fute of Lentulus could have no entrance. Dis thoughts were ertreame, and the dif quiet of his mind brought a difease to his body. But when he knelp that Terentia loved his friend, be appealed his pale fions and reffed content with his fortunes. The buconfrant gotbeffe, whole fmiles are overthaddowed with fromnes, not content honour thould foring by without enup, fends Tes rentiato walke abzoad towards Arpinatum, wherethen Fabius lined, as famous for bis rufficke and bucinill life as now he is twondzed at for his braue and courtly behaviour. Spring Terentia, he mas, as Lentulus, fnared in ber beau. tie, that the Romans, to report a miracle fato, love made him of a clowne a braue and refolute gentleman. The ercellen. cie of Terencia baning new pollifhed nature in Fabius, hee Interfor ber fanour, but ber thoughts that were forepointed with other pallions, intreates bim to bylole affection, and to make a conquest of himselfe by subusing the sorce of sang and that was Tully. This word (grave Senators and Ho mans) founding bafely in the eares of Fabius, caused him to take armes and Lentulus to befend his friend Cicero as for him, before he had loft his love, to bee meant to lofe his life. and withfron him in the face. Thus grew this muting, not against beautie, for it is a chiefe and of it felfe, nor against Tully, for bee is meane and bn worthy to bee remended by armes but againft Terentia, because the bouchfafed to loue Tully . This (Romanes) is the cause of this mutinp, to four preffe which, let Tully die, for hie had rather pacifie this frife by death, then fee the meanel Komanfall on the fwood. The common people at this beganne to murmure, pleafed with the plaulible Deation of Tully, which one of the benas tors feing, fod bope and faide thus. Terentia, Cicero bath thewed reasons why thou thousdeft loue Lentulus and Fabius. but what reason canft thou infer to love so mean a ma as I ully? Terentia blothing made this answere. Before fo honourable an audience, as thele graue Senators, and inorthy Komane Cittizens, womens reasons would feeme no reasons, especially in love, which is without reason, therefore I onely vielo this reason I loue Cicero, not able to ras tefie my affection with any arong reason, because love is not circumscript within reasons limits: but if it please the Senate to pacifie the mutinp, let Terentia leave to line bes cause the cannot leave to love, and onely to love Cicero. Af this the went and framed ber face with fuch a pleafing bers milion die that people fhonted, Done but Cicero, Wahere byon befoze the Senate. Tully & Terentia were betrothen.

13 3

QI

Lentulus and Fabius made friends, and the one named Lentulus, as the Annales made mention, mars ried to Flauia, and Fabius wedded to the worthy Cornelia.

FINIS.

FINIS.

FOR SOME OF THE SOME OF TH

